DEATH THREAT ARREST

Fred Gilbert, twenty-three years old, was arrested in Portsmouth, N. H., to-day by Postoffice Inspector Robinson on the charge that he wrote the letter received by Judge Samuel P. Hadley of the Lowell Police Court, while the Judge received on March 6, threatening his life.

Gilbert is one of nine men arrested in a raid in Appleton street, Lowell, some time ago, but he was discharged because there was no evidence against him.

Gilbert was arraigned to-day immediately after his arrest before United States Commissioner John W. Kelley in Portsmouth. He was ordered held in $2,000 for a hearing next Saturday in Portsmouth.

The death-threat letter was dated Nashua, March 5, and the Judge received it the next day. The letter was in substance as follows:

Judge Hadley:

If you punish any of the men arrested in Appleton street your house and everybody in it will be blown to pieces.

TWO OF THEM.

Judge Notifies Police.

Judge Hadley was much perturbed over the receipt of the letter and he notified the police at once. A detail of men was sent to the house and a sharp lookout was made for any suspicious persons. No one was discovered. But Judge Hadley still feels that the threat may be carried out.

Judge Hadley, discussing the case, said to-day:

"Lowell people do not fully realize the character of these men and have withheld the recognition that should have been given immediately to such a capture. There is nothing more discouraging to the men of the police department than the escape of the suspected after human life has been risked in rounding up dangerous criminals.

"A glance at the records of the men caught in the Appleton street raid is sufficient to indicate their character, and because they committed no burglaries in Lowell the police department is criticised for arresting them.

"Apparently some people think that a burglary must be committed or a human life taken before police action, and there are others who discredit the work of the police but who would be quick to attack the department if these criminals had been permitted to remain in Lowell until they had planned and committed a burglary or killed some one.

Clew from Letters.

"In my opinion the Lowell police department never made a more important capture than this."

Walter White, one of the men under arrest in Lowell, it is declared, is in love with a woman relative of Gilbert. It was through letters written from Lowell by White and others that the inspectors got the clew that led to the arrest of Gilbert.

In 1905 Judge Hadley inaugurated a system of probation which attracted attention. A man charged with drunkenness, his third offense, was given three months in jail on a suspended sentence and then placed on probation for the rest of his life in Lowell.

In 1907 he announced his belief that prisoners in the jails and workhouses should be put to work on public roads and improvements. He explained that he did not mean the chain gang idea, but proposed that form of punishment, but he pointed out that the safe and comparative freedom would be beneficial to the prisoners. It may be that this drastic punishment inspired the threatening letters.

Tried 75,000 Cases.

Judge Hadley is a lineal descendant of George Hadley, one of the first settlers in Ipswich, and was born in Hadley street, Middlesex Village, October 22, 1831. He attended Phillips Andover and Lawrence Academies, studied art, but gave that up for the law, which he took up in the office of Isaac S. Morse of Lowell. He was graduated from the State and National Law School in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., in 1863, and admitted to the bar in 1864.

During his service as a judge he has tried more than 75,000 cases of drunkenness and every crime known to criminal law.

AMERICAN PRISONERS ARE SHOT

Dispatches from El Paso, Tex., say that it is reported there that the fifteen Americans who were fighting with the Insurrectos and were captured at the battle of Casas Grandes a week ago have been shot.

Officials of the El Paso Junta expressed the belief that they had been shot, following the proclamation of martial law throughout Mexico.

In Ignorance of Fate.

Efforts to reach the military officers at Casas Grandes to-day failed.

Madero, under whom the men fought, is still within a few miles of the place, but according to his confidential messages, sent by couriers, he has been unable to learn the fate of his men.

Gonzales Garza, secretary of state of the Insurrectors, in charge of the El Paso Junta, said:

"There is no doubt that the Americans have been taken out and shot. Under the martial law the Mexicans would feel perfectly justified in shooting them, basing their action on the fact that the men were caught in actual battle."

Hope for the safety of the men is held out by some, because of the character of Colonel Cuellar, who commanded the federal troops. Colonel Cuellar was formerly military secretary of President Diaz, and is known as a humane man. His friends believe he would hesitate before executing Americans.

Situation Grows Worse.

Big officials of the army, as well as the public, were mystified further to-day about the Mexican war preparations, when Secretary of War Dickinson, General Leonard Wood and high officials of the Mexican government took great pains to declare that there was to be no intervention in the Mexican insurrection, and that the 20,000 American troops near the Mexican border, and the warships in the Pacific and the Atlantic, off the Mexican coast, were there only for their health, so to speak.

The correspondents at San Antonio and other points at the front, and many of the officials in Washington who make a business of studying such complicated situations, simply do not believe it. Mexican revolutionary experts believe is something like this:

That Diaz realized that he never could quell the insurrection with all sorts of help going to the rebels from the United States.

That that practically put the cause of the prolonged trouble up to the United States.

The Diaz is suffering from arterial sclerosis and may die at any time, and under the conditions that prevailed a week ago, anarchy was sure to follow.

That the forces of Uncle Sam were rushed to Mexico first to shut off help from the United States and, second, to cross into the Mexican country and restore peace in case it became absolutely necessary.

Death Penalty for Prisoners.

In the meantime the situation in Mexico is getting worse. The officials are being terrorized by bands of insurrectos. Towns and cities cut off from communication are suffering for food. Fighting between Federals and rebels is reported in many sections of the capaple country.

A Washington dispatch to-day says that one of the startling tangles about the Mex-

DIVORCED WIFE NOW FIGHTS FOR CHILDREN

Mrs. Jessie M. DeRonay of Neponset broke down in the Suffolk County Divorce Court to-day as she told how her husband, Dr. Warren DeRonay, took their two children from her last June and refused to allow her to see them since, despite the fact that she was given the custody of them on May 15, 1909, when she secured a divorce on the ground of cruel and abusive treatment. Mrs. DeRonay's husband is general manager of a large business at Corry, Pa., and his salary is $3,000 a year. The wife is now seeking, by petition, custody for permanent custody of the children and alimony.

AMBASSADOR REID'S SON TAKES A BRIDE

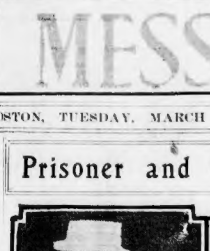
RACINE, Wis., March 14.—Miss Helen Miles Rogers, secretary to Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, wife of the American Ambassador to England, to-day became the wife of Ogden Mills Reid, son of the Ambassador. The ceremony, conducted in St. John's Chapel, Racine College, owing to the Lenten season, was attended only by relatives and a few guests. The couple will leave for a European trip. Mr. and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid attended the wedding.

COAL PROPERTY SALE.

Referee Olmstead in the United States Bankruptcy Court to-day granted the petition of Charles A. Barnes, trustee for the Cumberland-Mansfield Coal and Power Company, to sell the property of the company at private or public sale for seventy-five per cent. of its appraised value, which is $17,120.89. The property is farm and pasture land.

CABOT IS GRANTED A DIVORCE

Prisoner and Child Accuser



ALBERT DELOREY

BRIDGET O'TOOLE

"My wife said that she had ceased to love me, and therefore did not think it right to live with me. She deserted me, and our two children on December 11, 1907, and although I have on numerous occasions begged her to return to us, she has refused to do so."

This testimony was given in the Suffolk County Divorce Court to-day by Philip Cabot, a wealthy young Boston society man, in his action against his wife, Lucy. He was granted a decree by Judge Raymond.

The story told by Mr. Cabot, who described himself as a "trustee and manager of property," was one of the most pathetic ever narrated in the Suffolk county courthouse.

Mr. Cabot's Story.

"My wife and I were married in Cambridge, June 2, 1902," Mr. Cabot testified. "We lived most of the time at No. 2 Mt. Vernon square, Boston. My wife left me December 13, 1907.

"Did you have any conversation with your wife as to her reason for leaving you?" asked Cabot's lawyer.

"Yes. I had many talks with her before she left. She told me that she had ceased to love me, and therefore did not think it right to continue to live with me. She said that under the circumstances she thought we should live apart. I begged her very strongly to remain. I told her that it was her duty both to me and to our two children, Sylvia, seven, and our infant son, Faith, six and one-half, to remain. She simply replied each time that she did not love me and that she was not going to live with me.

"I finally suggested that as she had apparently made up her mind to leave me I would like her to take a trip abroad and that perhaps after a few months she would think differently. I told her that I thought it would be the wise thing to do, and that if she changed her mind she might come back to me and avoid all other publicity. She refused, but she seemed to have made up her mind that she would not live with me again. She returned from abroad in February, 1908.

"While she was gone I discussed the matter in great detail with my cousin, Henry Cabot, and also with Mrs. James J. Storrow, who was a friend of the family and on good terms with my wife.

Mrs. Storrow Sought Peace.

"When my wife returned from abroad Mrs. Storrow went to New York with my two children, as I thought that if it was possible to get my wife to come back to live with me, it could be done only in that way. She refused to return to me, although Mrs. Storrow and my cousin Henry, who also went to New York, did their utmost to have her return.

"I am not only willing but anxious that my wife should return to me now. I made numerous attempts both directly and through others to get her to come back, but each time she refused. I paid the expenses of her trip to Europe and I continued to pay her expenses until she declined to take any more money from me. She finally went to South Dakota. She has seen the children from time to time."

Mr. Cabot was then shown a paper which he admitted was papers in an action for divorce instituted in Sioux Falls by his wife and served on him.

Mrs. Storrow a Witness.

Mrs. Helen Storrow, wife of James J. Storrow, the banker, was the next witness.

Mrs. Storrow corroborated Mr. Cabot's testimony about going to New York and meeting Mrs. Cabot on her return from Europe.

"I urged upon her the necessity of returning home to her husband and children, but without success. She said that she did not love her husband and would not live with him for that reason. I saw her several times after, each time urging her to return to her husband and children, but she each time refused."

Henry B. Cabot, cousin of the libellant, testified in a similar manner. "She told me that she could not live with her husband because she had ceased to love him, and she declared that she did not believe it right to continue living with him. I talked with her many times about her duty to the children, but that did not move her. She said that she thought she had the right to be one of the guardians of the children."

Henry J. Shattuck of No. 60 State street testified that he was present at Young's Hotel when the papers in the case were served upon Mrs. Cabot.

Harriet Weatherbee, governess for the Cabot children, testified that the mother has been away since the Winter of 1908, although she has seen the children occasionally.

The question of the custody of the children was left open by Judge Raymond. The judge suggested to Mr. Cabot's counsel that he see Mrs. Cabot's lawyer and make some arrangement so that she might be allowed to visit the children. Mrs. Cabot was not in court nor was she represented by an attorney.

MOB MENACES ACCUSED MAN

A mob of 200 men and boys, worked up to a frenzy because of a charge made against Albert Delorey by a seven-year-old girl of Winchester, was held in check at Woburn by the police to-day, where the man was arraigned before Judge Maguire. Threats against Delorey were heard on all sides. The prisoner was held for the action of the Grand Jury, and in order to escape the violence of the crowd the policemen who had him in charge hustled him into an automobile and whirled him to the East Cambridge Jail.

The victim of the attack, Bridget O. O'Toole, a pretty child, stood in the courtroom with big, frightened eyes as she looked at Delorey.

"That's the man," said the little girl. "I know him."

Police Guard Prisoner.

Delorey is twenty-seven years of age. He is said to live in Woburn. It is charged that he attacked the little girl Saturday evening. The police found the man in Lowell yesterday. By that time an aff Winchester had heard of the story. When the prisoner was taken off the train at Winchester last night there was a demonstration that looked dangerous.

The feeling of last night was intensified to-day. But the police had been warned and Patrolmen Alex J. Mullen and John A. Harold took care that the mob-like crowd had no chance at the prisoner.

Little Girl Tells Her Story.

The first witness called was the victim of the attack. She, a little girl, scarcely high enough to look over the witness rail, her pretty face and golden hair, her plaid skirt and gray jacket, added a touch of brightness to the sombre courtroom. She stood straight and looked directly at the judge as she told her story.

"I am seven years old," she began, "and attend the Chapin School in Winchester. I live with Delorey for about two years. I saw him Saturday night at Tony Sacco's store. I went there to buy some candy. I started to go home, and he followed me.

"Just beyond the store he grabbed me and said he would choke me. He grabbed me by the throat and dragged me into the Chapin schoolyard. Then he said, 'If you tell I'll choke you.' He put his hands on my face and throat and in my mouth. He tried to get the 2 cents I had.

"He slapped my face some more and threw me on the ground some more and choked me again. I screamed twice and saw a man coming over toward me. Delorey got up and ran away, and that's all I remember."

QUINCY COMPANY BIDS ON FOUR SUBMARINES

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 14.—Bids were opened at the Navy Department to-day for four submarines, provided in the naval appropriation act of the last Congress. There were three bidders, the Electric Boat Company of Quincy, Mass., the Lake Torpedo Boat Company of Bridgeport, Ct., and the American-Laurent Company of Philadelphia. The bids ranged from $475,000 to $650,000.

THE WEATHER.

SEEK ENTRY IN BROKERS' BOOK

The books of the failed brokerage firm of Sederquist, Barry & Company showed a credit to one of its customers for dividends on New Haven stock which the customer had ordered bought, while they did not show that the firm had ever received those dividends. This was testified to-day at the trial of the four members of the failed firm for conspiracy and fraud.

The government asserts that this testimony shows that Sederquist, Barry & Company never bought the stock ordered by the customer, but pocketed the money.

The account referred to was that of Gardner K. Hudson. In court Sederquist and the indictment against the four men, they are charged with stealing $1,500 from Hudson by means of this order for stock.

Tells of Hudson Account.

Elmer E. George, former cashier for Sederquist, Barry & Company, was the witness who testified about the Hudson account. Mr. Webber said:

"Look up the dividend account of the Sederquist & Barry book and see if you find any entry corresponding to Gardner K. Hudson account showing that the firm received the dividends on New Haven stock that you testified were credited to the Hudson account yesterday."

The witness looked over the cash books and then said:

"I find no entry on the cash books showing that the firm ever received this dividend credited to the Hudson account."

The witness went through exhibit 134 and read the numbers of the different accounts, telling who each number represented. He was then asked if the book contained any accounts of the firm's customers. The question was objected to, but after argument was admitted. The witness declared that there were no customer's accounts on that book.

End of Railroad Strike.

The effort to have the documentary evidence already admitted against three of the defendants admitted against the rest was made to-day. A document labeled, Attorney Webber, while Elmer E. George, the former cashier of the failed firm, was on the stand. The witness was shown some stock sheets known as exhibit No. 131. On one of these he found an entry of 600 four-half shares of Pennsylvania Railroad stock. This was recorded as bought through account 1020 No. 2. This account was that of Freeman, Rollins & Co.

The transaction was recorded in exhibit No. 134, a sort of blotter used by the firm. No interest or commission was charged on the entry.

Mr. Webber argued that the fact that no interest or commission was charged tended to show that abnormal connection existed between Freeman, Rollins & Co. and Sederquist, Barry & Co.

Mr. Webber then moved that the evidence be admitted as tending to show the connection between Curtis and Freeman, Rollins & Co. and Sederquist, Barry & Co. In arguing it he said:

BOATS CRASH IN HARBOR AT GLOUCESTER

GLOUCESTER, March 14.—Four men were drowned in a collision between a gasoline fishing boat and a schooner off Ten Pound Island in Gloucester harbor at noon to-day. All of the men were aboard of the gasoline boat Hope which collided with the fishing schooner Hattie Heckman.

CRAFT CAME INTO COLLISION HEAD ON.

The drowned men are:

Captain John Anderson, owner of the Hope. He leaves a widow in Gloucester.

Ernest Anderson, married, of Territory Hill.

John Chamberlain, married, of Boothbay, Maine.

George Wright, single, who lives in Michigan.

The schooner was outward bound, the Hope was coming into the harbor. The schooner backed and the Hope went under her bow before either had a chance to change its course they came together nearly head on. The Hope was overturned.

Ernest Anderson and George Wright were in the cabin of the Hope. They were carried down with her. Captain Anderson and Chamberlain were thrown into the water. A boat was put over from the schooner, but when the other two were picked from the water they were dead. Captain Arnson King with his crew put off from Dutch's Neck Life Saving Station. They tried to revive the men, but failed. Three physicians were summoned and taken aboard the schooner, but they failed to revive Captain Anderson and Chamberlain.

Later in the afternoon a lighter from Gloucester started the work of finding and raising the Hope to remove the other two bodies.

FOSS MAKES A RENT INQUIRY

Governor Foss took both Houses and Senate by surprise this afternoon by sending in a special message asking for authority to appoint a joint select board to investigate the rental of offices outside the State House by State departments and commissions.

The Governor in "room Message" is request to make $45,000 which is being paid annually for outside offices rent for commissions and departments, some of which the Governor thinks can be very comfortably located inside the State House.

The special messages from the Governor to the Legislature are preceded by some inkling that they are on the way. But this message came through without any advance notice of any kind. The Governor handed it to the Senate and House right off the bat, as it were.

The Governor wishes the investigating board on outside office rentals to recommend ways and means to bring some of the "consigned" commissions back into the State House. The board is to file a report with the Governor, the president of the Senate and Speaker of the House not later than May 1 next.

When the message was read in the Senate and House it was referred to the committee on State House and Libraries.

GARIBALDI BACK TO LEAD REBELS

EL PASO, Tex., March 14.—Giuseppe Garibaldi, grandson of the Italian patriot, is in Juarez, Mexico, where he was killed at the battle of Casas Grandes, on March 6, according to the fact that the insurrectos in retreating became separated and Garibaldi was lost for two days.

A letter written on March 8 by Frank Lee Madero to the El Paso Junta says:

"For two days we thought we had had Giuseppe Garibaldi, but he only had retreated into the hills and we could not find him. Fortunately he reported back to duty to-day."

The following cable message dated at Rome on March 14, was received by the Junta with the request that it be sent to Garibaldi in the field:

"Have been much distressed over the Madero war. Please send advice.

"Ricciotti Garibaldi."

Giuseppe Garibaldi is almost 38 years old. He is the son of the fighting general on the personal staff of Madero. He joined the Mexican insurgents on February 9, crossing the border west of El Paso. He has been engaged in many revolutions in Honduras and Nicaragua.

REVERE HAS RECORD TOWN MEETING

The largest town meeting in the history of Revere was held in the town hall, with 995 voters attending. Albert S. Burnham, Republican, was elected town moderator by a vote of 563 to 342 over Roscoe Washworth, Democrat, the retiring chairman of the Board of Selectmen. Burnham's victory gives the Republicans all offices, they having elected every candidate with but one exception at the election a week ago. The Goethe appropriated $71,000 for salaries, streets, Board of Health and for Memorial Day exercises. The remainder budget totals $307,124.

RESCUED WOMAN FREED BY COURT

Lillian Davis, twenty-three, the woman who was rescued in Lynn harbor Saturday night, and Henry Meade, her companion in a hack ride from Boston to Lynn, were discharged in the Lynn Police Court today, following testimony to the effect that the case was only a "little incident of high life." The man and woman were accused of mutual assault.

Meade was arrested on a charge of contempt of court by wife and six children, of No. 48 Prospect street, Lynn. Mrs. Meade said her husband had not provided for her and the children during the past seven months. Meade was found guilty, and Judge Lummus placed him on probation for a year.

DEPUTY SHERIFF KILLS POLICE CHIEF

MURFREESBORO, Tenn., March 14.—Chief of Police Joseph Arnold was shot to death by Deputy Sheriff Hall early to-day in a dispute over the arrest of several prisoners. Hall was himself shot in the leg by Arnold before the latter dropped dead. The slayer was immediately arrested.

COVE STREET BRIDGE SETTLEMENT IS NEAR

The fate of the Cove street bridge may be determined next Thursday morning at the Mayor's office, when the commission appointed by Commissioner Thomas K. Kenney at the suggestion of the Mayor will discuss the plans for the bridge. The auditor has submitted the action of the Superior Court allowing damages to the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad of $300,000, but the railroad company has agreed to waive this, provided the bridge is removed. It is declared on account of its grades, the bridge is seldom used.

YEGGMEN LOOT NEW YORK BANK

RUSHVILLE, N. Y., March 14.—The private bank of the Westville Banking Company, here, was looted by three yeggmen at 5 o'clock this morning. The men escaped with several thousand dollars, practically all of the money that was in the vaults after blowing the latter open with dynamite. The explosion was muffled with heavy blankets but the detonation aroused nearby residents. These rushed to the bank, but by the time they arrived the men had made their escape.

Mrs. J. Bainbridge Jones, wife of the president of the bank, died several hours after the robbery, from shock.

CAMORRA FEAR BLUFFS JURORS

VITERBO, March 14.—Another panel of forty men from which to select jurymen for the trial of the Neapolitan Camorrists was drawn to-day by Cavalier Bianchi, judge of the Assise Court. This action was taken after twenty-two men who had fled from jury service were brought into court in irons and questioned as to their willingness to serve in the case.

While the thirty-nine defendants leered at the prospective jurors from their iron cage and smirked threats that vengeance if they should decide to serve, practically every one informed the court that he dared not become a judge of the Camorra's fate.

Would Postpone Trial.

Never has the secret power of the Camorra been more openly manifested than in this attempt to draw a jury. The situation has become so serious that Cavalier Santoro, the King's counsel, and prosecuting attorney in the present trial, to-day wired the Minister of Justice Finali in Rome asking him for further instructions in the case.

He informed the Minister that he had grave doubts of his ability to obtain a jury and asked for permission to postpone the trial and send it to some court in Northern Italy. This request was denied by the Minister of Justice and Santoro was told to proceed to the best of his ability.

Alfano Curses Camera Men.

Uproar was caused in the court by Placido Alfano, head of the Camorra, objecting to being photographed by the newspaper photographers. This followed a request some while had been granted in the corridor when the Camorra leader screamed curses and threats against the men carrying cameras who were trying to get his picture.

Finding that his abuse availed nothing, Alfano pulled a handkerchief from his pocket and held it before his face.

With the jury still incomplete the trial was adjourned until to-morrow.

THEATRE FIRE IN NEW HAVEN

NEW HAVEN, Ct., March 14.—Three alarms were sounded for a fire which started in an auto-room in the Bijou Theatre at 9 o'clock to-day, and which spread rapidly through the auditorium. The theatre is one of S. Z. Poli's circuit.

In half an hour the flames and water had done $50,000 damage, and were spreading downward to the stores on the ground floor of the theatre block.

The stores on the ground floor were: P. J. Kelly, furniture; Solomon Fry, pawnbroker; Ready-Made clothing Company.

Flames Had Good Start.

The Bijou Theatre block is an old, two-story structure of wood and brick. The auditorium and stage were on the second floor. The flames had a good start before the first alarm was given. Two later alarms brought a big fire-fighting force. But the flames swept through the auditorium rapidly, attacked the roof and worked downward to the ground floor stores at the same time.

For a while it was feared that the fire would spread to the First National Bank on one side and to business blocks on the other. But, after a half hour's stiff fight, the firemen managed to confine the flames to the theatre structure.

Famous As a Theatre.

The Bijou building is at least seventy-five years old and a number of America's most famous actors appeared before its footlights. It was known in its early days as the Music Hall. In 1895 Sylvester Z. Poli, the vaudeville manager, leased the theatre. Here was born the Poli chain of theatres. The venture proved successful. Poli finally purchased the house outright and improved it.

Five years ago Mr. Poli erected his large theatre across the street from the old Music Hall. This he used for vaudeville. The Music Hall, or Poli's Theatre, as it was called, was rechristened the Bijou. It has been given over to moving pictures and illustrated songs.

"BATHTUB TRUST" TO GO TO TRIAL IN APRIL

WASHINGTON, March 14.—The government will move the criminal trial of the thirty-four individuals and fourteen corporation defendants in the now famous "bathtub trust" case the first week in April. The statement is authoritatively given out in the Department of Justice that all the defendants will be called to answer the indictments without immunity of any sort having been granted to them. Attorney-General Wickersham has several times stated he would press for jail sentences in the event of convictions and will be pledged to compromise on pleas of guilty and fines only.

MAY CALL TROOPS IN RAILROAD STRIKE

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., March 14.—The strike situation on the Queen & Crescent railway to-day is so serious that the company is likely to ask for troops. Though passenger trains were operated, freight traffic has been virtually abandoned. Only one freight train has passed Somerset, and it was without a fireman, an armed mob at Kings Mountain having forced the fireman to leave his cab. A railroad detective, who had been riding as a guard, supplied the vacancy. The fireman's side of the cab was armored with sheetiron.

MELROSE TO INQUIRE INTO WORK ON SCHOOL

Melrose is to have a complete investigation into all work on the $85,000 additions to the high school building. The city government has authorized the committee on buildings to conduct a most rigid inquiry into the new work, which was opened last Winter it was found impossible to heat some of the class rooms, while others were unseasonably hot. There are many criticisms of other features. The building, with additions, represents an investment of $153,000.

PLAN NEW ARRESTS FOR TICKET THEFTS

Andrew J. Arnold, a conductor on the Plymouth line of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, Moses A. Rosenthal, alias Rose, and his wife, Minnie Rosenthal, all of South Boston, were arraigned in Superior Court, yesterday, on an indictment charging conspiracy to defraud the company of tickets. Arnold was also indicted in eleven counts charging larceny and eleven charging receiving stolen goods. Each defendant was held in $1,500. Mrs. Rosenthal fainted when they were arraigned. Other arrests are expected, for the railroad officials say hundreds of tickets have been stolen and an organized traffic in them carried on.

John Redmond's Daughter Will Write an Irish Play.

LONDON—The success achieved by Miss Amanda Redmond, daughter of "Parnell True," produced at the Palace Theatre, is so decided that the youthful dramatist has been asked by a leading actor-manager to write an Irish drama for the theatre. Miss Redmond, who is only twenty-one years old, is the younger daughter of the Irish leader and also has the unusual distinction of having a father, brother and uncle in the House of Commons. Her sketch deals with an incident of the Irish rising in 1803, and it is understood that her play will have its setting in the same exciting epoch.

Miss Redmond inherits her father's and uncle's literary tastes, and has contributed various poems and short stories to the Irish American and Australian papers.

Sees World Armament Revolt.

LONDON—Sir Edward Grey, the Foreign Minister, in the House of Commons last night made, on behalf of the Premier, an important pronouncement on the government's naval policy. Reginald McKenna, First Lord of the Admiralty, defended his estimates, explained that to 1914 Great Britain would have thirty and Germany twenty-one Dreadnoughts, and, he said, an unreasonable margin. Sir Edward Grey pointed out that it was the most civilized nations that spent the most on armaments and which, unless the path was found to man's feelings as well as to their minds, the growth of armaments must in the long run break civilization down.

Greece Lost in Territory.

LARISSA—A map of the boundary line between Turkey and Greece as defined in the treaty signed by the Ambassadors of the interested powers at Constantinople after the war of 1907 shows that the military commission did not perform its duty. One excellent instance is furnished by the case of the boundary line at the village of Dereli, four hours' journey from Larissa, though the commission placed posts at the two gates of Dereli, it is evident that they should have been placed miles further back toward the east and the north. Greece lost in territory.

Champagne Still Going Up.

LONDON—A serious shortage of champagne in London is reported by importers and directors of the leading hotels. Good wines are selling at fifty cents to one dollar a bottle more than last year and prices are going higher. Importers all agree that the shortage is due to bad vintages, and if there is no improvement this year prices will be increased 30 per cent. above the present advance.

Strikers Slain in Portugal.

LISBON—Strikers at Setubal attempted to capture a carload of sardines. The Guardia Civil, resisting the attack, fired and killed three strikers and wounded several others. Another strike has started at Lisbon, that of the Union Fabril, chemical workers. There is much excitement today, but the military element assembled in large crowds at Rocio.

Farewell to Dr. Jowett.

LONDON—Dr. J. H. Jowett, at a farewell luncheon in the Holborn restaurant, at which many nonconformist ministers were present, said: "I cannot express how the call to New York impels me to stand in New York and America and proclaim there the message which has become the very core of my being. It calls me at fifty as if I were only twenty-one."

Lady Granard Royal Guest.

LONDON—The Earl and Countess of Granard entertained the Duke and Duchess of Connaught at dinner last night at Forbes House. Lady Granard will be one of the leading hostesses in London in the coronation celebrations.

WOMAN CHASES PAIR AND RECOVERS CASH

Mrs. Margaret Gagne, of No. 3 Arthur terrace, Watertown, caused the arrest in Bowdoin square of two young men who, she charged, stole her pocketbook containing $7 as she was getting on a car at Newton corner. When she was about to pay her fare she discovered her loss. At Bowdoin square the two young men alighted and she followed them until she met Patrolmen Cunningham and Hurley. The policemen caught the pair, who gave the names Charles Eagan, eighteen, of No. 38A Centre street, Newton, and Bruce McClellan, seventeen, of No. 11 Eliot street, Watertown.

GIRL GAINS IN BIG CONTEST

By the CONTEST EDITOR.

That German characteristic of combining energy with systematic method certainly counts.

Witness the work of Eleanora F. Weiss of Roxbury, one of the District One candidates in the AMERICAN'S $35,000 Prize Contest.

Eleanora is Number Eight in the list of District One candidates, as published in the first list of candidates' standing. The seven leading candidates in District One are masculine. Eleanora, No. Eight, is the leader among the girls and women. She is not twelve years old yet either. She will be twelve on March 30. Contestants may be interested to learn how a little girl comes to rank so high in the big Boston District.

Eleanora is German. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank N. Weiss of No. 45 Juniper street, Roxbury. Her father is an artist. Eleanora, as will be seen from her own statement, is applying German thoroughness and systematic method to her vote-getting campaign. Result—she is one of the high-ranking candidates in her list. Here is Eleanora's own description of her campaign to date:

Makes Personal Canvass.

"As soon as the AMERICAN started its splendid contest I began to hustle to get votes. I got all my relatives and friends to help me. I got them in Boston and out of town. I got everybody that I knew.

"I go to the Sisters of St. Francis School on Highland avenue, Roxbury. I am in the sixth grade there. All my schoolmates are saving coupons for me and getting subscriptions. The Sisters are helping me.

"Then I wrote to all my friends all over New England. I started an endless chain of letters, asking for coupons and subscriptions, especially subscriptions. In my letter I explained the contest plainly so they could all see how big subscriptions count.

"I started out around my Boston acquaintances and made personal canvass in my spare time. Papa and mamma help me. My girl friends help, too.

"I keep the work up all the time. I ask my friends to do the same. I never let up. While I am well up in the district standing now, I may be passed by anyone below me if I don't keep on working.

Working to Get Piano.

"I am studying music all the time and I am after that piano which is offered as one of the biggest prizes in my district. I would like to win that piano. Of course, if I win the $8,000 house and lose it on an automobile I won't be disappointed. But the piano is what I really want. I am going to make music my work all my life, so the piano would be fine for me.

"I was mighty glad to see in the Sunday AMERICAN that I am way up in the district standing. To be number eight is good. Now I shall work like everything to get higher standing. My friends, now that they see me doing so well, will see they will work harder than ever.

"It keeps me awful busy getting votes and attending to all my coupons and subscriptions and all that, but it's worth it, I'm sure."

The Contest Editor thinks that is a pretty clever little statement for a little girl to make. And it is a whole sermon on how contests are won.

Notice that Eleanora speaks again and again of keeping up the work constantly, of seeing all her relatives and friends, of sending out an endless chain of letters and of never letting up.

She says particularly that she will exert every effort now to improve the already high standing she has attained.

It is work like this, persistent work, that wins.

The German race is noted for its ability to work hard and intelligently. They are keen rivals of the shrewd Yankee in business and commercial life, as well as being profound scientists and highly cultivated.

Eleanora Weiss, No. 8 in District One, is typical of her race in working intelligently and in keeping everlastingly at it.

Piles Driven Away FREE

Cases of Extreme Torture Cured So Quick as to Amaze All Who Know the Terrors of Piles.

Even a small and recent case of piles is bad enough, but thousands are in abject misery. Great protrusions render life a torture in every conceivable way, and yet, right within elbow room, is certainly a drug store that has the wonderful Pyramid Pile Cure. If not, it will be mailed free upon receipt of the regular price—50c.

It works like a hundred swift streams of water on a sudden blaze, puts the fire out, saves lives, saves the nerves, prevents gangrene, stops all pain, all itching, all bleeding, reduces all swellings, internal or external, cures quick and completely to stay cured. Many severe cases think they are hopeless, must be operated on, have part of their anatomy cut away. Don't let it happen.

Remember anything cut off is gone forever. Pyramid Pile Cure saves all this, cures rationally, restores the parts to normal healthy conditions. You can easily and quickly prove this by sending your name and address to Pyramid Drug Co., 278 Pyramid Bldg., Marshall, Mich. A free trial will at once be mailed sealed in plain wrapper, and you will never afterwards be at a loss to know what to advise when you hear of a case of piles no matter h w severe it may be.

For sale at all drug stores at 50c a package and be sure you get what you ask for.

TREMONT STREET, NEAR WEST

From France

New Foulard Silks

If one were to visit the great salons of any of the large Paris silk establishments, it would be noticed that the greatest activity would be among the foulard silks, and the showing almost bewildering. The display of Beautiful Foulard Silks by Chandler & Co. is equally strong and fascinating.

The popularity of Foulards in Europe is amazing, and so great has been the demand there, that not one-quarter of the allotment for America has been shipped. Chandler & Co., however, anticipated this situation and last September placed their orders with several of the large manufacturers in Lyons, France. By this farsightedness they have procured the greater part of their order. Many effective jacquard and broche weaves are confined to them for Boston.

The beautiful navy blues with white and monotone prints, particularly in the border effects, are exceptionally fascinating—the black grounds with white and the white grounds with black are very strong too, also the old blues, lavenders and wistarias, the rose shades and resedas.

Not only was there a decided advantage in placing orders so far ahead, and thereby securing the most beautiful designs and choicest colors, but there was also a great advantage in price.

Chandler & Co. are selling these magnificent double width Lyons foulards, which are on sale in several of the Fifth Avenue establishments at 2.50 the yard—

At 2.00 the Yard

Domestic Foulard Silks

Made by the great firm of Cheney Bros., also the celebrated Valentine silks—spot-proof and shower-proof.

Double width silks are practically new to these manufacturers this season, but they have excelled in the quality of the fabric and in the beautiful printing and lovely shades.

Chandler & Co.'s early selection of these silks secured to them the exclusive sale of some of the finest designs, and the same also applies to the Single Width Foulards.

Price, Double Width, the yard . . . 2.00
Price, Single Width, the yard, 85c, 1.00, 1.25

Shantung Pongee Silks

In the most beautiful shades of heliotrope, wistaria, navy, old blue, Copenhagen, Holland, delft, and Atlantic blue, vieux rose—over 1,000 yards of the natural pongee, with the glint of gold, or champagne tint.

Crepe weave—diagonal weave—twilled weave—serge weave—cord weave.

WHITE'S STAR DAY

R.H.WHITE Co.

Wednesday is White's STAR Day

TOMORROW—March 15th will signalize our third Great White's Star Day of the year. After four weeks of unusual activity comes the day of greatest activity—the third Star Day of 1911.

The last two Star Days preceding this were tremendous successes, and we can predict with almost absolute certainty that this will be the GREATEST STAR DAY ever known. Tens of thousands of our customers know that on Star Day many hundreds of different lots of Standard, Staple, Desirable Merchandise are sold at Lower Prices than at Any Other Time or Any Other Place. Come tomorrow and let us help you economize on things for personal use, personal adornment, household utilities and home decorations.

WHITE'S STAR DAY.

This Page is full of Bargain Surprises for White Star Day Only

For example—Under the heading of MEN'S CLOTHING you will see a few of the greatest bargains in Men's and Youths' Suits and Overcoats that were ever offered in this city. It is an actual fact that the garments offered for this one day's selling were formerly sold at $15, $18, $20 and $25 and that our only reason for disposing of them at $7.77 is that they are the balance of our entire winter stock. It will pay you to buy now, even though you may not need it now. Put it away until fall or next year. You will notice also that for $7.48 we offer 100 Men's Suits and Overcoats, sizes 34 to 42, formerly sold at $12, $15 and $18,

MINISTERS QUIT QUINCY CHURCH

Quincy people learned today with surprise that the Rev. Henry Channing Kinsley, the pastor, and the Rev. C. H. Ames, the assistant pastor, have sent their resignations to the First Unitarian Church of Quincy. The church is one of the most historic spots in Quincy. It is known as Stone People, and under its steps are buried John Adams and Quincy Adams, early Presidents of the United States.

News of their resignations leaked out today. Rev. Mr. Kinsley asked that his resignation go into effect March 1 next year. The church has refused to accept it, and has just appointed a committee to request the pastor to reconsider. Rev. Mr. Ames wanted his resignation to take effect June 30, next. This was refused.

The announcement made today started a great deal of talk among Quincy people. It was understood that Rev. Mr. Kinsley had resigned because he was tired of preaching to empty pews, and because his flock would not install him as pastor when he presided. Just why both preachers should have resigned at the same time could not be learned.

The AMERICAN goes into more homes than all the other evening papers of Boston combined. It is the Quality newspaper.

'BOSTON NEEDS NEW LEADER'

Hugh Bancroft, former District Attorney of Middlesex County, in a red-hot speech before the Legislative Committee on Federal Relations today declared that a great leader is needed to rouse Boston to commercial activity. Mr. Bancroft declared that Massachusetts money should be spent at home—millions in developing Boston harbor and in making Boston the great port it should be.

"I pray that a leader may yet arise," said Mr. Bancroft, "a leader with a gift of imagination."

Mr. Bancroft spoke in opposition to the proposed Federal income tax amendment to the Federal Constitution being approved by Massachusetts, strictly on the ground that Massachusetts needs her own money to spend here. John Cowdin, Colonel of the half of the Chamber of Commerce, also declared that the Chamber is entirely opposed to the Federal income tax on the ground that the money is needed for the development of the Commonwealth.

Bury Wealth in the West.

Mr. Bancroft said:

"Are you, the directors of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, going to let the enormous sums from the West and South walk away with the equivalent of from $250,000,000 to $1,000,000,000 of Massachusetts money?

"What would Massachusetts do with $250,000,000? Boston [illegible] $1,000,000 spent at once for street and boulevard developments. It ought to be. And $25,000,000 more besides that ought to be spent at once in Boston for other improvements. If we had the money. Every other city and town in the State has its proportionate needs.

"We are quibbling about spending $3,000,000 on Boston Harbor. We ought immediately to spend $15,000,000 and be ready to spend $50,000,000 more within a very few years. Liverpool spends that much without turning a dollar. Her river pool is only half as big as the real Boston.

"I pray that a leader may yet arise here with a gift of imagination. Can't you see where we are? Boston, the natural outlet for half a continent, one of the best harbors in the world with a vast railroad system that must drain every new to develop Boston commerce to make good its investment and expansion; Boston practically one whole day nearer Europe than New York, and a half a day nearer the great new markets of South America.

Warns Against Knocker.

"If you want to raise more money by taxation, spend it here and spend it liberally. Don't send it to Washington to be thrown away.

"We have been sending out of the State altogether too much money, that ought to be invested here, without adding a new compulsory drain. I am not here to oppose an income tax as such. A reasonable, fair, uniformly administered tax, to be spent in this State, has much in it to commend. It might well be substituted for the present personal property tax and for a large part of the amount and fairly administered would further diminish more revenue.

"Let us get away from the knockers and the pessimists, turn our backs to the rising sun, spend our money at home, and look to our own gain."

John Candler Cobb, speaking for the Boston Chamber of Commerce, said:

Cobb Opposes Federal Tax.

"The Boston Chamber of Commerce for which I appear is strongly and unitedly opposed to the acceptance of the proposed income tax amendment to the Federal Constitution. I wish to make it clear that the Chamber has not taken action against the principle of an income tax. In fact many of these people who are opposed to this amendment are in favor of a State income tax as being much more fair and just than our present inequitable system of taxing personal property, and I wish to especially emphasize the fact that the consideration of this amendment is now so befogged by the discussion as to whether or not a personal property tax is a desirable form of taxation that the real issue has been largely lost sight of.

"We are not considering the propriety of an income tax. Each State has the right to levy an income tax or any other tax within the limits of its constitution except duties on imports and exports, which are reserved to the Federal government by the constitution. The Federal Constitution does not allow the imposing of direct taxes on the property of citizens by the National government, such taxes being reserved for State and local needs."

TRY THIS TONIC AFTER THE GRIP

The Treatment Helped This Ohio Man from the Start And Quickly Restored Him to Health.

It is of the utmost importance to your health, if you have suffered from the grip, that you cleanse the blood of the lingering germs and put it in condition to resist disease.

After the acute attack the sufferer is left with a debilitated system, is short of breath upon the slightest exertion and is affected by every change of weather. The system is in such a weakened condition that it is powerless to resist the attack of such diseases as pneumonia and bronchitis.

This is a condition which emphatically calls for a tonic for the blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the best medicine for this purpose for they act directly on the blood which they cleanse of all impurities. They tone up the nerves and give health and strength to the debilitated system.

Mr. J. Irvin Howell, who is in the real estate business at No. 719 East Broadway, Alliance, Ohio, was cured by this remedy. He says:

"For several years I had the grip every winter and was left with the distressing after-effects. My appetite was gone, I had palpitation of the heart and terrible headaches in the top and back of the head. I had chilly spells and my body was so cold that it seemed I could not get warm. There were pains across my kidneys and I had no ambition to work. I was confined to bed very often.

"I took no relief until I took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They helped me from the start and I have never been in better health than now. I attribute my speedy recovery to the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and recommend them to all sufferers from grip disease."

If you are suffering from after-effects of the grip or other wasting disease, and the treatment you have taken proved of no benefit, it is time that you try the remedy that has cured so many stubborn cases, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or sent, postpaid, upon receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y. A copy of our booklet, "Diseases of the Blood," is free on request.

BREAD MERGER TO HIT BOSTON

Banking companies in Boston and throughout New England were interested to-day in the announcement of plans of Wall street financiers to back a $30,000,000 bread company, for the purpose of making war on bakeries which now enjoy a practical monopoly in certain markets. Of the Boston bakers the George G. Fox company of Charlestown has been represented at meetings in New York, and is considered likely to enter the combine. Other Boston bakers have been approached with regard to joining the proposed corporation, which will be called the National Bread Company.

At the Fox bakeries to-day it was said that Frank R. Shepard, the manager, was in Atlantic City. B. S. Fergusson of the J. G. & R. S. Fergusson Company of Roxbury said:

"The National Bread Company has been talked around for at least two or three years. I understand the matter is all in the air. Whether we enter the company will depend of course on the proposition put up to us."

Dispatches from New York declared the new trust will be financed by John W. Gates and his friends. There will be branch bakeries in a score of big cities, including Boston and Providence. It is planned, the announcement says, to open a fight on the Schults Bread Company of New York, and on the Ward company of Boston, Providence, Pittsburg and Chicago.

The Schults and Ward companies are each organized with capital stock of $5,000,000. Behind the Ward company are said to be Henry C. Frick and Henry Phipps, so that they with their friends will eventually be pitted against John W. Gates and his supporters.

While Boston and Providence are the only two New England cities immediately involved in the bread conflict, other small cities will be affected. The chief aim of the national company will be to control the New York markets, which means the use of a billion loaves a year. Rum another big item will be the New England market for bread.

"HELLO" WEDDING IS NEAR AT MIDDLEBORO

MIDDLEBORO, March 14.—It is announced that Miss Mildred Glidden of Cortland street, chief operator at the local telephone exchange, and Joseph Worgan, line inspector of the same office, were united to wed. The old office was "closed" into the new office on Saturday evening, and there was a celebration by the employes, but nothing was known about the engagement then. After the "Hello girls" had learned the news board Miss Glidden invited them to her home in evening and announced her betrothal.

WARNING TO CROOKED POLITICAL BOSSES

This is a photograph of Abe Ruef, the San Francisco boss, on his way to prison to serve a term of fourteen years for bribing city supervisors. Ruef was exposed by the San Francisco Examiner. He wrote a threatening letter to Mr. Hearst which bore the signatures of the city supervisors. Despite the threats, the exposure of Mr. Ruef was continued, and against most powerful pressure his conviction was obtained.

In the photograph the convicted boss is shown without his moustache and wavy locks. He was permitted to remove them before he began his sentence.

DR. FLEET DISCHARGED.

Dr. William E. Fleet of Columbia street, Cambridgeport, charged with being an accessory before and after the fact in an illegal treatment case, was discharged by Judge Charles Almy in the Cambridge District Court to-day. The Suffolk County Grand Jury had returned a "no" bill in favor of Dr. Fleet.

DENIES HELLEUR DIED FROM BLOW

PLYMOUTH, March 14.—Joseph Helleur did not die from a blow on the skull, but from some other cause, it was declared to-day by the defence when it opened its case in the trial of Charles P. Fernald, charged with second degree murder in causing the death of Helleur.

The defence was opened at 10.35 o'clock by Attorney H. H. Baker. He declared that Helleur was a drinking man, and that evidence would be produced to show that his death was not due to a fractured skull from a blow with a billiard cue in the hands of Fernald, as the government charged.

"Fernald never struck the blow," said Lawyer Baker. "The jury will take the stand and tell you so himself. He will tell you that there was drinking and carousing in his poolroom on that night that he was ashamed of.

"The defence will bring witnesses here who will tell you just what did happen. They will support the defendant and tell you that he did not strike Helleur.

Denies Death Charge.

"We do not like to attack the habits of the dead. But this is a serious case. We must. A man who at the end of fifty years is a heavy drinking man is apt to have heart trouble and kidney trouble. We will offer medical testimony that Helleur did not die from a fractured skull, but from another cause.

"I must caution you that in find this defendant guilty of second degree murder you must find first that the blow was struck, that it was struck with malice aforethought and that Helleur died as the result of the blow.

"If the blow was struck and Helleur did not die as the result of it, you must bring in a verdict of assault. If the blow was not struck, and Helleur died of a far different cause, then you must bring in a verdict of not guilty."

Revelry in Poolroom.

Henry A. Ellis, a Yarmouth lawyer and a member of the Legislature, testified that he had investigated the case for Lawyer Baker shortly after the tragedy. He declared that Charles Irish told him that the witness Allen was intoxicated on the night of March 14.

Charles C. Taylor was questioned by Judge Sullivan for the defence.

"I was in Fernald's poolroom on the night of March 14," said the witness, "and saw Helleur and Allen come in about 10 o'clock. I heard Fernald and Helleur talking together. When Fernald went to the door to put Helleur out he did not have a billiard cue in his hand.

"Fernald did not go out after he put Helleur out. I noticed Allen that night and he appeared to have been drinking. Helleur was a heavy drinker, but I never saw him drunk."

Miss Margaret Holt, a nurse, who testified that she was living in Onset a year ago, said that on that night she was nursing Mrs. Clarence E. White.

"The White house is the one came next to the rear of Fernald's poolroom," said Miss Holt. "I remember the night of March 14 a year ago. I came to the back of the house and asked the men to stop swearing. Charles Irish, Len and a man named Smith were in the rear of the poolroom. They were passing a bottle around among them. I saw them drink from it. Shortly after this Allen fell off the platform."

The State Rests.

The State rested its case at 10 o'clock. Dr. Charles G. Gleason of Plymouth and William E. Baker, a turnkey at the Plymouth jail were the last witnesses.

Dr. Gleason testified that he was present when Medical Examiner Morse performed the autopsy on Helleur's body. Under cross-examination he admitted that the crack in the skull might be in the bones dried, but he did not think that it would happen.

Turnkey Baker said that he knew Helleur when the latter was in the jail in June, 1909. He said he was released after serving three months. He denied that Helleur had liquor while in the jail.

District Attorney Barker announced that the government rested and asked that the skull of Helleur might be admitted as an exhibit. Judge Quinn admitted the exhibit.

It was just a year ago to-day that Fernald is said to have struck the blow with a billiard cue that the government claims caused Helleur's death. After the skull was produced in court yesterday and referred to to-day again, it was thought that Fernald might break down. He did not show any traces of emotion.

URGE CITY AID FOR THE ART MUSEUM

The legislative Committee on Cities gave a hearing to-day on Mayor Fitzgerald's bill authorizing the city of Boston to make an annual payment, not exceeding $50,000, to the Boston Art Museum, to be used by the trustees of the institution continue to open the building to the public free of charge for the same number of days in the week that it is open at present. Arthur T. Kipling, representing the trustees, declared that it is surprising to hear Boston referred to as the centre of culture at a time when one realizes that the city contributes not a single cent to the institution, the very home of art. Gardner M. Lane, president of the board of trustees, and Frederick P. Fish, chairman of the State Board of Education, favored the bill.

PLAN TO EXTEND LAW OVER BOSTON TRUSTS

WASHINGTON, March 14.—It is not improbable that one of the tariff bills passing Congress at the extra session will carry an amendment extending the corporation tax to "common law trusts." That is the speculation to-day around the Capitol, following the announcement of the decision of the Supreme Court that the corporation tax law is constitutional, and that the so-called "common law trusts" of the trust and the department store trust of Boston do not come within its provisions because they are not organized under any statutory law.

TO VOTE ON PLAN TO BEAUTIFY BROOKLINE

The town of Brookline to-morrow evening will vote upon a proposition to establish a town board of engineers to advise in the future upon the best ways to improve the town. Among the plans is that of a more harmonious arrangement of public buildings in a civic centre.

A. O. H. READY FOR BIG PARADE

As the principal feature of the observance of St. Patrick's Day by the Ancient Order of Hibernians of Suffolk county will be a street parade of its various divisions reinforced by branches located outside of the county, for weeks the various divisions have been actively preparing for the event.

It has practically completed the arrangements for what the members feel will be a creditable demonstration of the strength of the oldest actively regular and efficient organization in this country.

The parade will start at 2 o'clock from Beacon and Charles streets Friday afternoon. The chief marshal, Richard Dwyer, through his chief of staff, William T. Fleming, has issued the official orders for mobilization.

The parade will proceed through Charles street to Park square to Columbus avenue to West Canton street to Washington street, past the Cathedral of the Holy Cross, where it will be reviewed by Archbishop William H. O'Connell, Washington to Dover street to Tremont and Dorchester streets, South Boston, where the marchers will join the Evacuation Day parade.

The following formation will be observed: Military companies will march in column of eight, the front platoon forming division. The rifle portion will march in column of fours open order.

The parade will be reviewed by Governor Foss and Mayor Fitzgerald at the corner of Broadway and C street, also by the chief marshal of the Evacuation Day parade, Dr. William H. Ruddick, and staff, at the corner of Broadway and A street, and by the county president, Richard Lawyer, and staff, at Broadway and Dorchester avenue, where the parade will be dismissed.

WIFE ABANDONS PRIMROSE SUIT

The separation suit of Mrs. George H. Primrose against the veteran minstrel, who is well known to Boston theatregoers, has been discontinued. Justice Gay in New York has granted the order discontinuing the suit. It is believed that Primrose and his wife have become reconciled.

Mrs. Primrose grew dissatisfied with her home relations last Summer and brought the suit. She alleged she had been deserted July 8, 1910. Mr. and Mrs. Primrose were married in Mount Vernon, April 25, 1901. They have no children.

At the time of the filing of the action Mrs. Primrose alleged her husband was wealthy and had an income of $20,000 a year.

Mrs. Primrose was Miss Esther Sidney of San Francisco before her marriage. She had an enviable reputation as a singer.

On October 17, 1910, Justice Mead in the Supreme Court awarded Mrs. Primrose alimony of $20 a week and $75 for counsel fees.

The minstrel is reported to have declared that he had deeded her property worth between $150,000 and $200,000 and that she was wealthier than he was.

MANY ARE KILLED IN RIO JANEIRO RIOTS

RIO JANEIRO, March 14.—Anti-clerical rioting occurred at San Paulo. The military and police attacked the mob, which fought back, and during the encounter a number of persons were killed and others injured. One hundred and fifty arrests were made. All of the churches in San Paulo have been placed under military guard. The rioting originated in the disappearing from a parochial school of a young girl, who could not be produced by the school authorities when a demand for her was made.

MANICURE GIRLS FIGHTING MAD

The manicure girls are mad, cuss to their heart's content.

It's all on account of the proposed legislation to license and tax manicures. There will be a hearing on the bill before the Committee on Public Health at the State House tomorrow. The manicure proprietors and cappers are preparing a protest before the committee in a body.

Many wrathful things are said in the manicure parlors today about the police in connection with the license and tax scheme. The police are blamed for it.

Miss Theresa McDonald, head manicurist in the Kloes establishment on Washington street, said:

"The idea of taxing and licensing us manicurists! If they try to license the manicure girls they will have to have examiners. Say, who is qualified as a manicure and who is not? Who will be the inspector of manicures. I wonder what information will be necessary to qualify a policeman to be manicure inspector."

The idea of some husky, two-fisted policeman putting the manicure girl's through a series of nail-polishing stunts, to ascertain whether they are experts or not, strikes the girls as highly amusing.

Rudolph Mertin, who runs a big hairdressing, shampooing and manicure establishment in the Jefferson Building on Washington street, said:

"If any such law is passed, I will close up the manicure part of my business and discharge my manicure girls. Such a law would simply mean to the general public and especially to the women who patronize my place that the manicures are not a desirable class. No such bill ought to pass."

Miss Nellie McKeown, head manicure at the Mertin establishment, said:

"Why don't the police arrest the proprietors of the objectionable places, if they wish to reguiate the business, as they say. For that matter, as many of these places are run as dressmaking parlors as manicure parlors. If they license the manicures, why not the dressmakers?"

MISS M'DONALD, MANICURE GIRL DEFENDING RIGHTS

RIOTING IN BIG EXPRESS STRIKE

NEW YORK, March 14.—With the threatened general strike of 15,000 express company employes still hanging dreading broke out today in the conflict of the Adams Express Company and its drivers and helpers. The company tried to restore the full delivery system and as a result general disorder resulted. Fifteen wagons, in charge of strikebreakers and guards, were followed by hooting crowds when they left the company's stables in East Fifty-Sixth street, near Third avenue.

NAT GOODWIN TO TAKE NO. 5

Miss Margaret Moreland is said to be "next" in Nat C. Goodwin's matrimonial shop.

Dispatches from New York today declare that she is to be Mrs. Nat No. 5.

She is Mr. Goodwin's leading woman on his present vaudeville tour in "Lend Me Five Shillings." She is a pronounced blonde, whereas the Goodwin wives have as far run to brunettes.

On tour Goodwin and Miss Moreland are together much of the time off stage. They dine together. They go motoring. They seem to enjoy each other's companionship. From all these indications it is thought that, as the wedding was to know all about it, luring particular stress on the bonny widow part of it. The local land owner is married and the postmistress evidently did not realize that, for she wrote to her explaining the case and sent her plans of the site in question.

Mrs. Reynolds says she read about his property from a newspaper which had been sent to her by a friend.

"I am a great reader of papers," writes the widow. "I am a lonely widow. My late husband was a native of Maryland and his name was George W. Reynolds, M. D., of Sandy, N. C."

Mr. Reynolds told the lonely widow among other things that he has as he erected a fence in front of the disputed land the city tore it down. He wrote how he had been taxed $207.60 and how the city offered him only $100. He also told of his suit against the city and disclosed the plans.

HER HUSBAND FROM MISSOURI

BROCKTON, March 14.—Mrs. M. Y. Reynolds, a lonely widow of Sandy, N. C., who declared was born in Missouri, wants to be shown by Lowell M Reynolds, her namesake here, why he thinks his strip of land at Warren avenue and Pleasant street is the "most valuable on earth," as it has been styled.

The city appropriated the property for sidewalk purposes and offered him only $100 after he had been taxed $207.60, he says, and he sued the city. But that's another story.

1,300 ARRIVE ON ROMANIC

With the arrival of the White Star liner Romanic from Naples, Palermo and the Azores today, the Spring rush of immigrants from Italy began. There were 1,500 on board the big vessel when she docked at 10:30 o'clock.

In anticipation of her arrival, 5,000 of Boston's Italian colony was out along the water front.

Cupid was a passenger by proxy on the Romanic for in the second-class cabin and steerage were twenty prospective brides whose sweethearts greeted them gleefully at the dock that even the hardened customs inspectors blushed. There will be at least a score of weddings solemnized in Boston as a result of the Romanic's arrival.

Two passengers were detained, to permit a search of their baggage for smuggled jewels.

Twenty girls from the department of sociology at Wellesley, with an instructor, were interested spectators of the landing of the immigrants.

SECRETARY MEYER TO BE AN AMBASSADOR

WASHINGTON, March 14.—Secretary of the Navy Meyer will succeed Whitelaw Reid as ambassador to Great Britain, according to a report at the State Department today. No confirmation of the rumor could be obtained as practically all the chief officials of the Government are absent from the capital.

BREAKS UP A BAD COLD IN A FEW HOURS AND CONTAINS NO QUININE.

If is a positive fact that a dose of Pape's Cold Compound taken every two hours until three consecutive doses are taken will cure Grippe or break up the most severe cold, either in the head, chest, back, stomach or limbs.

You distinctly feel the cold breaking and all the disagreeable grippe symptoms leaving after the very first dose. It promptly ends the most miserable neuralgia pains, headache, dullness, head and nose stuffed up, feverishness, sneezing, sore throat, running of the nose, mucous catarrhal discharges, soreness, stiffness and rheumatic twinges.

Pape's Cold Compound is the result of three years' research at a cost of more than fifty thousand dollars and contains no quinine, which we have conclusively demonstrated is not effective in the treatment of colds or grippe.

Take this harmless Compound as directed, with the knowledge that there is no other medicine made anywhere else in the world which will cure your cold or end Grippe misery as promptly and without any other assistance or after-effects as a 25-cent package of Pape's Cold Compound, which any druggist in the world can supply.

GIVEN AWAY FREE

Nature's Vegetable Pepsin Given Away Free at Your Nearest Drug Store.

By presenting the coupon below you will receive a trial package of Munyon's celebrated Paw Paw Pills.

Paw Paw is a fruit that grows in most tropical countries and contains the only vegetable pepsin yet discovered. Its action upon the liver and stomach is truly wonderful. Having combined this natural remedy with other medicaments Professor Munyon is giving to the world one of the greatest stomach and liver remedies known to mankind.

Munyon's Paw Paw (Compound) Laxative Pills coax the liver into activity by gentle methods. They do not scour; they do not gripe; they do not weaken, but they do start the secretions of the liver, and stomach, thus correcting constipation, which, without doubt, is responsible for most ailments. There are about 26 feet of human bowels, which in many respects is really a sewer pipe. When this pipe is clogged the whole system becomes poisoned, causing biliousness, indigestion and impure blood, which often produce rheumatism and kidney ailments. Nine-tenths of the cathartics that are now being sold set up serious forms of indigestion and so paralyze the bowels that they refuse to act unless forced by some strong purgatives.

Munyon's Paw Paw Pills are truly for the blood. They invigorate instead of weaken; they enrich the blood instead of impoverish it.

These pills contain no calomel, no dope. They school the bowels to act without physic.

GOOD OLD DAYS OF BIG COUNCIL

A new argument for a large City Council of Boston, with the members elected by districts, was advanced before the Legislative Committee on Metropolitan Affairs to-day by Representative William L. V. Newton of South Boston.

"A small City Council, with a lower chamber, puts too much of a burden on members of the Legislature," said Newton. "Here's why. In the good old days if a man wanted a job, or a widow wanted her taxes abated, or a boy wanted to get out of the hands of the police, they had their Aldermen, their two Representatives and their three Common Councilmen to apply to for aid. Nowadays, they have no Common Councilmen, and the members of the City Council are mostly blue-bloods who don't do favors for common people. The result is that the poor members of the Legislature are on the jump twenty-four hours a day putting people to work and getting them out of trouble."

Newton argued for his own bill for a City Council of twenty-seven members, elected by wards. He described the sufferings of his doorbell at the hands of constituents "because the City Councilman who lives over my way isn't in touch with the people of his district."

Former Alderman Thomas J. Giblin of East Boston, also arguing for a larger City Council, said that "the flack way folks object to a large Council because they're afraid there'll be too many Mulligans in it."

William L. Chase of Dorchester paid his respects to the coterie whom he described as "the Matthews-Sullivan-Rothwell combination" and whom he blamed for the infliction of "the worst charter that any city ever suffered under." "If fake reformers are to be permitted to continue their leadership," he said, "the few Republicans now representing the city of Boston in the Legislature will be the last ever to be elected in the city."

Chairman John A. Sullivan of the Finance Commission urged the committee to reject all proposed charter amendments and to give the new charter a chance. Sullivan opposed the suggestion, made at previous meetings, that City Councilmen serve without pay. "The laborer is worthy of his hire," he said.

Representative Newton interrupted to ask: "Do you think, Mr. Sullivan, that members of the Legislature get enough pay now?"

"Some of them," snapped the chairman of the Finance Commission.

GRAFT INQUIRY ANGERS DANCER

The temperamental lot handed to Miss Anna Pavlowa, the Russian court dancer, when the news was printed in New York that she was desired as a witness in St. Petersburg for the Russian railroad graft inquiry, is somewhat abated to-day. Pavlowa has promised to dance Thursday night at the Metropolitan Opera House, providing she feels well enough by that time. Her recovery from her first collapse when the Russian story was published in cheerful news for Boston because the famous dancer is billed to appear at the Boston Opera House next Friday and Saturday.

Pavlowa was given no need as a Russian lady can be when the New York newspapers printed the story that she was wanted as a witness in the St. Petersburg inquiry. The cabled story was to the effect that M. M. Dandre, the Russian official now under investigation, is an admirer of Pavlowa and had given her rich gifts.

Medals from the Czar.

Pavlowa is very wealthy herself. She has earned thousands of roubles from her dancing. She has medals from the Czar and other honors. The idea of being dragged into a political inquiry was shocking to her. She tried to have the story suppressed in New York and was extremely wrathful when it appeared. She refused to dance on the impulse.

Dmitri Smirnoff, the Russian tenor, was sent to placate the dancer by the management of the Metropolitan. Smirnoff reported that he had extracted a promise from Pavlowa to dance Thursday night. Smirnoff sailed from New York to-day for St. Petersburg. He promised Pavlowa that he would straighten out the matter to her satisfaction with the court authorities.

Court Beauty Is Jealous.

New York dispatches to-day say that the real cause of Pavlowa's name being brought into the railroad graft case was the jealousy of another woman, who is the court beauty in St. Petersburg. This beauty greatly admired M. M. Dandre, who is a friend of Pavlowa, but merely in a platonic fashion. The court beauty, however, believed that Pavlowa was her rival. When Dandre was arrested this woman saw her chance. She insinuated that some of the money Dandre is said to have scattered went to satisfy Pavlowa's whims.

If the court beauty intended to get revenge on Pavlowa for fancied injuries she certainly took a successful method, for the dancer has been aggravated to her temperamental limit by the whole affair.

MOTHER HELPS LIEUT. WALKER

NEWPORT, R. I., March 14.—When the Walker divorce case was resumed to-day Mrs. Rebecca White Walker, widow of the late Admiral John G. Walker of the navy and mother of Lieutenant James W. G. Walker, took the witness stand as a witness for her son, the respondent.

In course of her four hours of testimony at the morning session Mrs. Rebecca Walker said she thought her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Nina Chinn Walker, who is now seeking divorce was unreasonably cranky.

Speaking of Mabel Corcoran, the gateress in the Walker home in Boston, with whom Mrs. Nina Chinn Walker has accused her husband of being unduly familiar, Mrs. Rebecca Walker said:

"I never heard my daughter-in-law complain of the presence of Mabel Corcoran."

The so-called "threats letter" which Walker received from Mabel Corcoran, was read in court again to-day in the original. A paragraph which had not come out before appeared this time. It read:

"I hope to look at you soon. How I love you."

Mrs. Rebecca Walker said regarding this letter:

"The original was a less compromising letter than the copy my daughter-in-law made, when she took the letter from the postoffice at Charleston, S. C."

Mrs. Rebecca Walker testified that, while Walker was in Nicaragua in 1909, a year after his marriage, her son's first child was born.

"My daughter-in-law," continued the witness, "complained that no word was heard from her husband. She wrote to me. I wrote him to telegraph his wife, which he did, saying, 'I wish to congratulate you on the successful birth of the child and hope you are doing well.'"

Witness testified that her husband, Admiral John G. Walker, left $200,000 in trust

WEDDING RING EXPERTS REBEL

WEBSTER, March 14.—Joe Miron, the comic opera celebrity, who is the professional pride of this town, is endeavoring, with Nat C. Goodwin, DeWolf Hopper and other men of matrimonial experience, to prevent some of the marital mishaps which make stageland so perilous to domestic bliss.

Miron is one of the active officers in the new Anti-Climbers' Association, which is the latest by-product of the famous Lambs' Club of New York. Goodwin and Hopper are fellow officers with Miron.

It is allowed here that Joe Miron is qualified to speak on the trials and triumphs of matrimony. He is now defendant in a suit for separate support and is himself suing for a divorce.

Nat C. Goodwin is a past master in matrimonial life and strife. DeWolf Hopper is considered as a worthy official for the new organization.

The members of the Anti-Climbers say that girls are making the stage a clearing house of matrimony. They go on the stage merely because they are ambitious to marry a millionaire.

This practice, the men say, discredits the stage and lowers its high plane. They feel very keen on the subject and declare they propose to regulate the marriage evil on the stage they do not say how. But a fellow-townsman, Joe Miron will get away with it, once he starts in.

THE LOWEST ADVERTISING RATE IN NEW ENGLAND

No newspaper in New England reaches for its advertisers as many readers at as low a cost as does

THE BOSTON AMERICAN

It costs an advertiser but one and one-hundredths cents ($.0101) per inch per thousand circulation, or seven-hundred-twenty-five thousandths of a mill ($.000725) per agate line per thousand circulation.

From the most reliable statistics available the BOSTON AMERICAN is surpassed in the lowness of its advertising rate (and then only by a slight margin) by only two newspapers in America—The New York Journal and the Portland (Oregon) Journal, a paper with 37,161 circulation.

The circulation of the AMERICAN is subject to the most rigid investigation by anyone at any time.

DIAZ SATISFIED WITH TAFT'S EXPLANATION OF WAR MANOEUVRES

NAVY WITHDRAWN FROM MEXICAN PORTS; INSURRECTOS FORCE THE FIGHTING.

loan situation was the news that differed from the war department that the railroads had been secretly notified to get cars in readiness for moving 15,000 additional United States troops to the Mexican border.

That this notification has been given was common gossip among railroad employes in yardmasters' and train dispatchers' offices despite the fact that the utmost secrecy had been imposed on those who knew of the matter. Besides the proposition of an additional army to go to the Mexican frontier the war department is using its utmost efforts to recruit to a war strength the regiments now at the front.

That the mobilization of troops is more than a "war game" is indicated further by the action of the war department in canceling orders to the infantry regiments which have received instructions to leave for the Philippines.

Here is the way the regular troops are disposed at the present time: On the Mexican border, patrolling, 3,000; mobile body at manoeuvre division at San Antonio, 15,000; coast artillery at Galveston comprising First Separate Brigade, 4,000; in the Philippines, 12,000; in the Hawaiian Islands 2,000; in Alaska, 1,000; at various army posts throughout the United States, 11,000; total, 52,044.

HARVARD MAN LEADS INSURRECTOS TO VICTORY IN MEXICO

EL PASO, March 14.—Creighton is up again and the border is aflame.

News that Captain Oscar A. Creighton, Harvard graduate, soldier of fortune, and general dare-devil, now with the insurrectos, is headed toward Ciudad Juarez, just across the boundary line, has been the spectacular development in to-day's war news. An attack on Juarez is expected at any moment. General Navarro with 2000 Federals is on the way, while Creighton has a small force, but those who know the American realize that no disparity of numbers would cause any hesitancy on his part if anything is to be gained by an attack in any case Creighton will make his presence felt.

Creighton reached the vicinity of Juarez after a march of about 100 miles from the south along the Mexican National railroad, leaving in his wake a trail of burning bridges and dynamited tracks.

His arrival near the border was sensational, for, after releasing twenty-five other Americans who had gone into Mexico to investigate a mine and had sought his protection, he waited until dark to announce his presence by a terrific explosion which wrecked a bridge at Mesa, 10 miles south of Juarez.

The destruction of the bridge tied up the railroad, which for a time was considered as far as Candelaria. It also put an end to the hope of sending relief by train to Chihuahua.

Coming upon the American mine prospectors at Chicago, 100 miles south on the Mexican National Railroad, he informed that he intended to destroy what remained of the railroad. If they wished to reach El Paso he would allow them to provision on two handcars.

The handcars were put in action but the Americans, fearing a position attack, preferred to remain under Creighton's protection. At one time Creighton entered a station and tore out the telegraph instruments, which long had been in flames because of the cutting of the wires.

Gives Out Souvenirs.

"Here," Creighton said, after chewing the telegraph keys to the miners, "take these along for souvenirs."

When the party reached a point near Juarez Creighton told the mining men to proceed on foot. In case they were mistaken for the Mexican federal troops for the surgents and fired on he would return the fire, he said.

D. B. Smith, W. T. Sweyer and Marshall Cassidy, who led the fighting party reached El Paso and described their trip. Creighton came from New York city, they said.

"Citizens of the United States are rapidly forming leaders of small bands of insurrectos, according to reports from the interior. While they are not experienced enough to take command they are grouped under command of their own countrymen. Many Americans are applying for enlistment at the insurrecto junta, despite the threat of the Diaz government to punish with death any one found participating even in a slight degree with the revolutionary movement. What happens is not given out by the junta, but it is known that the men do not remain long in El Paso.

Much fear is expressed as to the fate of fifteen Americans who were taken prisoners by the federal troops at Casas Grandes a week ago. It is the opinion of some that the men were shot.

Blew Themselves Up.

The story of Creighton's campaign in the heart of Northern Mexico without opposition by federal troops caused much comment in El Paso. It was said that throughout his entire march not a shot was fired at him.

According to reports received by the junta, six federal soldiers were killed at Saraguosa, on the border, twelve miles east of El Paso. The federals went out from Juarez to lay a mine under a road and the mine exploded prematurely.

The flame of revolt has reared two other states, Coahuila, on the Texas border, and Morelos, where the insurrectos already has assumed formidable proportions. The fact that the State of Morelos is south of Mexico City, while the activity of the Madero-ites has so far been confined almost wholly to the north, is taken as indicating the spread of the revolutionary movement.

The Revistas have cut the wires and stopped railway traffic so that communication with the disturbed states is lacking.

More Work for United States.

The outbreak in Coahuila will mean more work for the United States troops on border patrol, for hitherto there has been no trouble in that section.

In Sonora state the Insurrectos have captured the town of Nanojoa, driving out the Federal garrison after a sharp engagement.

The headquarters of the Revolutionary Junta here are crowded daily with Americans who want to join the insurrecto forces. Many of them are ex-soldiers. They don't seem to care about pay. But they do want to fight, and by that same token they do fight, as was told in the story of the Casas Grandes battle.

The incident of Captain Harrington with his bunch of cowboy troopers scouring red as they galloped down the main street of Casas Grandes with their arms full of dynamite bombs, which they lighted by touching the fuses to their cigars and playing a murderous ping pong with bundles of explosives until the last bomb was dropped by the Federals, in its bare pious recital has the swing of a ballad of gallantry.

Arrivals from Chihuahua say the city is not in bad condition, that there is plenty of food, and that it will be some time before actual suffering begins. But there is a band of insurrectos creeping on their way toward the source of the city's water supply, intending to divert it.

A battalion of the Twenty-third United States Infantry, now at Fort Bliss, has been ordered to San Antonio, and the post here will be in charge of Colonel Steer of the Fourth Cavalry, consisting of ten troops, who will have charge of the border patrol.

Attack on Agua Prieta.

General Blanco is still hovering near Agua Prieta and gathering men for a second attack on that town.

So badly have the tracks of the National Railroad been wrecked that the Mexican government is having great difficulty in moving its armored steel cars is indicated in mail advices. It was stated that city federal troops, leaving in an armored car from Juliaca, got within a mile of Santa Rosalio, when the tracks in front of them were blown up. About twenty of the insurrectos, who had ventured on the tracks, were killed by the machine guns of the armored car, but the train had to pull back.

LESS WAR TALK IN SAN ANTONIO

SAN ANTONIO, March 14.—With no orders to "dash for the frontier" yet received, the division camp here is fast settling down into what is going to look more like a peaceful "camp of manoeuvres" than that of an "army of observation." All the talk among the higher officers here, from General Carter down, is of manoeuvres. It is only the junior officers who now are talking among themselves and very privately to civilians of "invasion" or "intervention."

To-day General W. H. Carter, in command of the "Manoeuvre Division," said:

Relieving "Tired" Troops.

"These manoeuvres, have been in contemplation for some time by the general board of the War Department. The department has wanted to assemble an entire division and carry out certain extensive manoeuvres beneficial to the entire army, and when we have carried them out, we hope successfully, it will be a great object lesson to the militia of the various States."

"Are you intending to hold all the 15,000 troops at San Antonio?" he was asked.

"Well," said the general, after a very brief pause, "there are quite a good many men doing patrol duty along the border where they have been stationed for some time, and it may be found desirable to replace them with some of the fresher troops which are here."

General Carter in saying it might be necessary to replace the tired troops patrolling the border with fresher ones, did not say that the old troops were to be relieved and that they were to be brought back to the assigned elsewhere in Texas. Considerable significance was attached by two of the correspondents to this omission.

To a question if there was any other significance in the position, the general replied: "The carrying out of these manoeuvres here is the only purpose of which I have been informed.

"The War Department looked upon San Antonio as a place adapted for manoeuvres, and that is why the troops are here. There is everything here that might be met with in the field. It is near the border of the country, and I dare say this particular site was selected to demonstrate that a movement of troops might be facilitated under nearly all circumstances.

First Brick Ready.

"If the manoeuvres work out satisfactorily here, it is probable that the new field regulations will become popular. That is to say, they will be adopted for the future instruction of the army.

"The division now assembling here might be called a brick around which we propose to build a house, or one might say it is a nucleus of an army. We have this division. To that we might add another division of militia, and then another division. Then there would be an army."

Major Van Horsen of the German army, military attache to the embassy at Washington, is the first representative of the European armies on the ground. He will be here at least two weeks. That other foreign attaches are on the way was made certain to-day when provision was made for tentage for those who prefer living in camp rather than hotels.

All of the troops ordered here are on the ground except the Ninth Cavalry and the Fourth Field Artillery from Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo.

Making infantry out of 4,000 soldiers of the Coast Artillery is the task now confronting General A. L. Mills, commander of the brigade of United States troops concentrating at Fort Crockett, Galveston. The work of drilling the men has begun among the recruits who already have been here.

But despite this peace talk bets are being freely offered in San Antonio that the army will be on the more within a week, and it is an even-money chance as to whether it will be across the border to take a hand in Mexican affairs or to the coast of California to resist an invasion by the Japanese.

No one believes here that the army has been hurried to Southern Texas at this unfavorable time of the year merely for the purpose of drilling and going through the manoeuvres having no other object than to increase the efficiency of the army.

Rush of Recruits.

Great haste is being made by the War Department in efforts to fill up the regiments long on a peace footing, to a war basis and recruits are being sent in here on practically every train which arrives.

Colonel Van Orsdale of the Seventeenth Infantry brought in fewer than 700 men in his regiment when he arrived, and notice has been given that the regiment is to be filled up to its war footing and he is to have a total of 800 additional soldiers. The Eleventh Cavalry is to receive 429 recruits to fill it up to its war quota of 1188 enlisted men, and relatively great additions are being made as rapidly as possible to fill all the other units of the army now assembling on the border.

At regimental headquarters and in the camp streets the correspondents can find any number of officers who say that the talk that these manoeuvres are merely peaceful in character is simply ridiculous and they can cite any number of indications, aside from the fact that ammunition and supplies have been so plentifully furnished, to prove that business with somebody is meant.

The haste being made in filling the regiments to their war strength, for instance, is one of the signs of the times, the officers say.

Peace Is Menaced.

Generally speaking, the prevailing sentiment is not that we want a war, but that the President is acting on definite information to the effect that our peace is seriously menaced and that he has rallied out this army in preparation for trouble if it comes and in the hope that our display of preparedness may cause whatever country is interested on the other side to pause and reflect.

MANOEUVRES HAVE NOTHING TO DO WITH MEXICO, SAYS WOOD

WASHINGTON, March 14.—"Troops have not been massed on the Mexican frontier. The 20,000 now assembled at San Antonio are far from the frontier. The increase in troops at San Antonio has nothing to do with the Mexican situation."

This is the statement of Major-General Leonard Wood, chief of staff of the army. He said further that the troops had been sent to San Antonio for "manoeuvres," which would last several months or long into the Summer. He said he expected to return to Washington, but not before the latter part of April and that no more troops would be sent to the "manoeuvres," nor cavalry to the Rio Grande River.

MOSQUITO SHELTER ORDER FOR TROOPS CAUSES SENSATION

SAN DIEGO, Cal., March 14.—An order has been received from the War Department by Brigadier-General Tasker Bliss instructing him to have the officers and men of his command inoculated with anti-typhoid serum and to equip them with mosquito shelters. The order has created intense excitement here.

This is the first general order issued by the War Department for such a safeguard against typhoid, malaria and kindred diseases, and to the soldiers it means but one thing to wit: service in Lower California and perhaps further south.

Another order received here and deemed scarcely less significant than the other relates to a contract for transporting freight by wagon, bids for which are asked for by 11 o'clock to-morrow morning. The conditions are for bids to transport 20,000 pounds of freight an hour's notice.

RUSH PERKINS OFF TO JOIN U. S. FLEET IN MEXICAN GULF

The torpedo boat destroyer Perkins sailed from the Charlestown Navy Yard to-day for the Gulf of Mexico, and will there join the "fleet of observation," which is working with the army along the Mexican border. Although the battleship New Jersey is in dry dock, work is being hurried on her, and authorities in the yard claim she can be sent to sea in six weeks. All her heavy guns are aboard, but if she receives hurry orders for sea and is expected to leave the port in six weeks, she will go without the power cost of white lead and will wear the war color gray.

Woman's True Friend

Experimenting with new and untried medicines is foolish, and often dangerous. It would take a medicine more than forty years, to prove itself so universally good as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. During all that time it has been woman's favorite medicine—a restorative tonic, uplifting and invigorating the nervous and discouraged and giving them the final touch of perfect health.

Women use Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription in preference to all other advocated medicines for it contains no alcohol or habit-forming drugs—is not anything like advertised, secret, or patent medicines—does not claim to be able to do impossible things.

THE ONE REMEDY for women devised by a regularly graduated physician of vast experience in woman's ailments, and adapted to her delicate organism.

THE ONE REMEDY good enough that its makers are not afraid to print its every ingredient on its outside wrapper.

You can't afford to allow yourself to be overpersuaded into accepting any secret nostrum as a substitute for this honest square-deal non-secret medicine. Don't do it. No honest druggist will attempt to cheat you in this way. He who does should be rebuked and avoided. Doctors prescribe Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for their worst cases because they know what it contains and know its ingredients to be of the very best.

It's well now and then to gently cleanse out bowel germs that breed weakness, cause foul breath, loss of appetite, dizziness and headache. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets keep bowels sweet and clean. Recommended by druggists because of their purity, goodness, and active gentleness.

Shut In, But Not Isolated.

"I don't know what I would have done without my ever-faithful telephone," said a mother to one of our contract agents.

Shut in as nurse, she not only directed her household affairs from the Extension Set in the convalescent's room, but was able to relax the tension of confinement for herself and her patient by occasional chats with friends.

The telephone is useful in so many ways that one need not expect illness in order to justify its value; but preparedness is half the battle.

By the way, if you have a telephone, what say you to an Extension Set at 50 cents to 75 cents a month?

Prospective subscribers are urged to order at once. A new directory goes to the printer on March 17, and it will be helpful to you to have your number listed therein, as it will be if the work of installation can be completed in time.

FIVE INDICTED BY GRAND JURY

The special grand jury which has been in session during the past week reported to-day before Judge Stevens in the superior Criminal Court. It is known that five secret indictments were reported to-day. The names of the indicted persons will not be known until they are brought before the court.

The special session has heard among other cases witnesses in the case of Robert S. Brown, under arrest in New York charged with forging the endorsement of George Gin Draper and others to notes for over $100,000. Brown will be brought back to Boston to-morrow.

Witnesses were also heard at this special session who are believed to have information in the case of Former Senator Frank J. Linehan, now out on bail, having been arrested charged with a murder friend. Linehan was arrested on an indictment warrant, returned by the grand jury at a previous sitting. New evidence in the Linehan case is believed to have been the cause of this further investigation by the special grand jury.

MEN TAKE UP FEATHER STYLE

Let Boston women keep their "haremscarum" skirt, as Tom Powers calls "em—the skirt, not the women.

What do the men care if the women are grabbing the men's pa—trousers. Us men are going to have feathers in our hats.

Fact! All us men about town are going to sport bird scenery in our Kellys. Every little derby is to have a feather of its own—bunches of feathers.

Fashion notes at the Country Club races, for instance, will read like this:

"Among the most refreshing hats was that worn by J. Grafton Minot, the cotillion leader and Beau Brummel. Mr. Minot sported a mackinaw straw with a narrow band and a plume of pale purple peacock feathers rising slightly to the leeward of the left ear. His hat created a perfect furore among the men."

The race track and society reporters can collaborate on a paragraph like this:

"Miss Ann Hamlin's longitudinal dignity was rendered all the more striking by a perfectly dear hat, simple yet appealing to the trained eye. This hat was a black-banded lid over which floated a fluffy feather of pearl gray. Mr. Hamlin was loser with inquiries as to his milliner."

Lawson in a Nifty Lid.

Mr. Thomas W. Lawson's brunette charm will be greatly enhanced by a simple sigrette of Plymouth Rock plumes, daintily waving over a pea-green fedora. The effect on State street of the intrepid "Tom" charging to his office in the above head-roof is only to be conjectured.

Time was when the Back Bayne hat for men sported a modest bow knot at the rear instead of on the left side. This was the first move toward femine frills.

Now the real hat plumage for men has come—or is on its way. Advance reports of coming fashions in men's hats say that the feathers including delicate sigrettes, wavy plumes and jaunty tips from the pelican, peacock, canary, flamingo, bird of paradise, cockatoo and great horned owl.

The sight of some of our conservative Bostonians coming down, Tremont on a sunny morning with red flamingo feathers streaming out from behind their Panamas will show that Boston is not so hide-bound or conservative as reported.

Political circles will wait to see what Mayor Fitzgerald chooses. If feathers are to be worn, it is known that the Mayor will be feathered to the plumage limit.

Small Quill for Ajax.

Size, figure and completion of the wearer will have to be considered. Of course the dainty quill that would be appropriate for "Dick" Pleid would not be large enough for Dr. "Ajax" Mahoney, the statuesque health commissioner and flour director.

The Boston Beau Brummel is to be a gay bird, if he follows fashion closely. He will wear skin-tight trousers, drawn by aid of a shoe horn. He will have feathers in his hat. He will sport a corsage bouquet, if he wishes to go the limit.

In another year, it is expected, that we will carry smelling salts and a lorgnette.

By that time the women can have the harem skirt if they want and the bloomer, too, and all the offices. Man won't have time for them. He will be studying fashions.

FEAST OF PURIM IS CELEBRATED

Purim, or the Feast of Easter, one of the most joyous holidays in the Jewish calendar, was celebrated to-day by Orthodox Jews throughout the world. The feast comes to an end at sunset to-night. It commemorates the delivery of the Hebrews from the oppressive rule of Haman, prime minister under King Ahasuerus. In every Jewish home to-day special foods were served, and there were rites commemorative of Queen Esther, and the other principals in the drama around which is woven the Book of Esther in the Old Testament.

One of the features of Purim is the cooking of Hamantasen. This is a three-cornered cookie, and represents Haman's hat. A peculiar relish comes from the memory of the fate that overtook the wicked Haman.

In all the synagogues at the early morning services to-day an important part of the exercises was the reading of the Megilath Esther, or Story of Esther. This is read from the long parchment roll.

The ancient custom of exchanging gifts was widely followed. Boston Hebrews remembered the inmates of prisons and charitable institutions. All the Jewish clubs and other organizations observed the feast.

JILTED GIRL ENDS LIFE WITH POISON

THOMASTON, Me., March 14.—A year ago, on the night set for her wedding, Miss Lethia G. Perkins of Rockland disappeared. YOUTH KILLED BY ELEVATOR

David Greiger, twenty-two, of No. 2 Eaton street, West End, was killed in the Amory building in Washington near West street to-day while he was working on the top of the elevator. Greiger was practically decapitated, half of his head being torn away by steel cables.

Occupants of the office building were thrown into the greatest excitement. Women in the corridors fainted when they heard Greiger cry out. It was some time before the police could quiet the crowd that flocked into the building and others who came from the offices.

The accident occurred while Greiger was on the elevator between the second and third floors. He had been working in the building but six weeks.

TRAIN VICTOR IN DEATH RACE

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., March 14.—Engineer Dodge drove the Star Harbor express faster than a mile a minute for eighteen miles early to-day to save the life of Arthur H. Blood, his fireman, who lay unconscious on a pile of coal in the tender, where he had been thrown by a piece of timber falling from a freight train. The timber crashed through the cab window.

Blood was taken from the train at the Portsmouth station and hurried to the hospital, where it was found he was seriously injured. His name was placed on the dangerous list, but the doctors say that, thanks to Dodge, the fireman will recover.

The accident which caused Blood's injuries is one of the strangest that has ever happened on any railroad. The express left Boston at 10 o'clock last night, bound for Bar Harbor, and was traveling at the rate of fifty miles an hour. At a point about equi-distant from Seabrook and Salisbury, Me., the express passed a freight train traveling in the opposite direction. A pile of lumber in one of the rear cars of the freight shifted and a long piece of timber crashed through the cab window, striking Blood in the pit of the stomach, lifted him from his seat and threw him with terrific force into the tender.

Dodge, who was looking out of the window of the opposite side of the cab knew nothing of what had happened until he reached for the throttle, and the broken window and then discovered Blood unconscious on the pile of coal.

Dodge was unable to do anything for the injured fireman, and took the only chance that was open to him—to reach the nearest station and summon medical assistance.

Dodge jammed the throbs with coal and made the eighten miles to Portsmouth in less than eighteen minutes. The passengers on the train were ignorant of what had happened.

CHILD IS FATALLY BURNED BY BONFIRE

While playing near a bonfire in the back yard near her home in Quincy, Mary Callahan, three years old, stepped too near the blaze, her dress was ignited and she was soon enveloped in flames. Her mother ran to her assistance, and drawing her close to her body, tried to put out the fire. The girl was seriously injured and is not expected to live, while the mother was badly scorched.

MODERN BOSTON PORT BOOSTED

Several hundred members of the Boston Fruit and Produce Exchange shouted enthusiastic approval to-day when Henry C. Long spoke at their monday meeting for the quick development of a modern Boston port. He criticized the lobbying firm of Lee, Higginson Company for building a belt line railway for New Orleans instead of Boston. Mr. Long stacted right in hurling his heaviest calibre shells and the first broadside was a comparative statement of what other and particularly South American ports are doing.

"The city of Buenos Ayres with a population substantially the same as real Boston has expended $50,000,000 on her harbor and is planning to expend $15,000,000 more and already appropriated.

"Rio de Janeiro with less than 1,000,000 or to be more exact about fourteen souls has spent $25,00,000; Rosario, the "Chicago" of South America, situated 300 miles up the river from Buenos Ayres, has spent $10,000,000.

"The Grand Trunk has about 2,000 miles more to build, the Canadian Pacific about 1,000, the Canadian Northern about 2,000. Then each will be a magnificent modern trunk line and the absolute ports of Montreal and Quebec will be utterly incapable of handling this enormous traffic.

"It is up to you, gentlemen. It is up to Boston, the Hub of New England. This traffic must come either to New York or Boston. I shall every day write to go to the State House on April 3 and help to get a law providing for a great body to take charge of and build up the port of Boston, or any other law that will bring it about. Will you come?"

Mr. Long's address was applauded several, and in other ways showed their belief in the speaker.

$100,000,000 INCREASE.

PHILADELPHIA, March 14.—The stockholders of the Pennsylvania Railroad at their annual meeting to-day authorized an increase of $100,000,000 of the capital stock of the company, from $500,000,000 to $600,000,000.

BOY NEAR DEATH AFTER FROLIC

William Purdon, seventeen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Purdon of No. 19 Arnold street, Arlington Heights, is in the Massachusetts General Hospital to-day, with a fractured skull and other very serious injuries, as a result of a frolic with schoolmates yesterday afternoon. He is likely to die.

Young Purdon was one of a company of High School boys returning home down Massachusetts avenue. They were playing tag and jostling each other about. Young Purdon, in escaping being caught by two of his companions, rushed into the middle of the avenue and ran behind an electric car and directly in front of one going in the opposite direction on the other rail.

The car struck him and he was run several feet. He was picked up and conveyed to the house of a neighbor, where Dyr. Merkel, Webb and Champion attended him. It was found that he had sustained a compound fracture of the left leg, his left ear torn in shreds, and he has multiple cuts about the face, head and body. It is also feared that he is internally injured. At the hospital it was found that the boy was also suffering from a fracture of the base of the skull.

The boy is in his first year in the High School. He is the eldest of five children.

$100,000 SAWMILL FIRE.

WINNIPEG, March 14.—The sawmill and plant of the Red Deer Lumber Company at Strathcona, Alberta, was destroyed by fire to-day. The loss is $100,000, covered by insurance.

Simple Way for the Thin and Pale to Be Plump and Rosy.

Samose can hardly be termed a medicine, it is in reality a flesh forming food. Taken before or after meals, it mingles with the food you eat, enables it to assimilate and readily digest, so as to make rich blood and pleasing plumpness.

Houghton & Dutton Co. customers have told them of the remarkable results following the use of Samose, the great flesh forming food, and they are so thoroughly convinced of its reliability that they are selling it under their personal guarantee to refund the money if it does not do all that is claimed for it. You who are thin and in poor health cannot afford to let another day pass without getting a box of Samose on those terms.

OWNER RUSSELL SAYS RUSTLERS NOT SOLD

By R. W. LARDNER.

American Correspondent with the Rustlers on Sagamore Tour.

R. W. Lardner.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 14.—William Hepburn Russell, president of the Boston Rustlers, is a busy man. In addition to his daily engagements on the golf links and ball grounds, he has a lot of dealing to do. Two rumors concerning his team were hurled at him in rapid succession last night and he gave a dose of arsenic to both of them.

One of them was to the effect that one H. H. Frazee of Chicago and New York had purchased the Rustlers, and another said that Billy Hamilton recently signed a bond and bought the holdings of Vice-President Page. To the first one, Mr. Russell said the Boston Club was not for sale, and in answer to the other one, Mr. Page couldn't get out without his consent and that there wasn't a chance of the vice president's desiring to sell out at the present time.

Didn't Buy to Sell.

"I don't believe there is a bit of ground for either story," said President Russell; "in fact I know there is not. We didn't buy the Boston team to sell it right away. I'm in the game for the love of it and I haven't begun to have enough of baseball. Mr. Page and I hold most of the stock, but some of it is for sale, though not enough to count for anything. This Mr. Frazee of New York may want to buy a little, and perhaps he will get some, but Mr. Page and I will continue to be the real owners.

"As for the Hamilton story, that's the first I've heard of it. But I have an agreement with Mr. Page which provides that he cannot sell his holdings without securing my consent. In order to get that consent he naturally would ask for it. He hasn't asked and I don't believe he is going to. So I guess you'd better say there is absolutely nothing to either story."

No one who has had the pleasure of watching President Russell during the practice sessions down here would imagine for an instant that he intended selling out. He is one of the most enthusiastic of major league magnates. He is as pleased with his possession as a kid with his first hair-cut, and it is the unanimous opinion of those in camp that run the Boston Club that Mr. Russell is the most interesting morning practice regularly and the afternoon games from the vantage point of the Bizyere Grill. His enthusiasm and encouragement to the youngsters and jaunty pass these days of baseball will not be forgotten by Manager Tenney.

So, William Hepburn, you needn't act like a man who is tired of the game.

Perdue is a Bug.

The left-handed throwers on the club are jubilant. Frequent charges that they were not entirely sane were not refuted by them at all, but now they have a bit of evidence that will surely convince the world that right-handers can be worse. The bit of evidence is Hub Perdue. He is a right-hander big bit, but in taking off some of his big-arm daily exercise, he discovered that he limited that to half training off any of his eccentricities. So four of a limit, but being started by sailing him a jug; he signals it; more he is tossed at it, but Hub is a right-handed pitcher. He has won many a ball game and will win many more, but his conversation are not likely responsible for his good minor league record, even if he has a lot of pitching stuff besides. A batsman who could and did look at Hub might listen to his remarks and still keep his mind on the business at hand would be superhuman, according to the Rustlers. Bill McGilvray, pitching with Perdue at Hub's side the last season. Bill claims to be sane, says another year on a team with Perdue will deprive him of his sanity, so he is not responsible for himself will be

M'FARLAND IS MADE FAVORITE

One of the greatest boxing bouts between two aspirants for the welterweight championship will be staged in this city tonight when Packey McFarland of Chicago, idol of Western patrons of the sport, meets Owen Moran of Birmingham, England, for ten rounds at the Fairmount A. C. of New York avenue.

It is conceded by many of the best boxing authorities that McFarland and Moran are the greatest of present day boxers and in fact each of these sportsmen is master of knowledge of the art of fistic, and that he knows of long ring experience could scarcely open the eyes and but a few minutes pass with a stiff slugging match before any that these clever contenders for the championship at their best, and furthermore the referee is not empowered to render a decision.

McFarland the Heaviest.

The weight at which McFarland and Moran have agreed to meet, which is [illegible] pounds at 4 o'clock, this afternoon, gives the Chicago boxer considerable advantage in point of weight, as he comes from eight to ten pounds heavier than the Birmingham boxer, and from his training camp reports it did not appear to worry him to lift 130 pounds in the ring, but decided to get rid of this disadvantage if possible, so the match was made, but no regrets in the matter, and says he will not attempt to be a stronger boy than Moran, physically, when the opening gong is tapped.

According to the best inside information reported from both camps in various parts of the country, M'Farland is a general favorite for tonight's contest and odds of 10 to 8 and 10 to 7 are said to be easily obtainable, which both boys being masters of the art of boxing both upon the attack and the defence, will adopt a rushing, boring-in style of milling, which would delight the fans in front of the ropes with the greatest of stimulus. And it is surprising to note the little betting talk there is with regard to the knowledge of the game though known at the Ringside, who persist in the coming bout, notwithstanding the shade in weight, Moran is a stronger lad than McFarland.

In Spite of Wolgast's lamentable physical condition, and his poor showing since his defeat by the Dundee, Owen Moran is generally regarded as a coming between the premier lightweights of the world, and that position he short journey, a great contest will result.

Has Both Reach and Height.

McFarland is a very popular favorite. He has the advantage in reach and height, and is generally conceded to be one of the greatest defensive lightweights that has been developed upon this side of the water in many years. Upon the offence, while aggressive, he differs, it appears but McFarland is the master of the little Irishman from England. He can punch with a wonderful record for attack, is as quick as lightning on his feet, and he can uppercut a right handed foe, while if he lands upon the little idol of the land of John Bull, will mean knockdown, and in almost certainty.

Moran is a masterful boxer, and he can punch well, but it looks as if the better ring of fighting tactics would rest in McFarland's corner, and that the tide of battle should go his way.

It should be borne in mind that while Moran landed a knockout mallop upon Battling Nelson, the ex-champion was only a shadow of himself when the battle was fought, and the bout conceded from the opening of hostilities.

Police Will See the Fight.

Police Commissioner Cropsey has issued an order calling upon all captains of police to see that no violation of the law against prize fighting is suffered in their precincts. While the order did not specifically refer to the McFarland Moran fight, to be held at the Fairmount Athletic Club tonight, it was taken at police headquarters to mean that the fight must come strictly within the legal requirements if it is held.

It was said that plain clothes men would be detailed to the task of seeing that the law was obeyed at the Fairmount Club, and that if they managed to buy seats as non-members of the club the fight might be prevented.

On the other hand, the promoters of the bout believe that they will be able to meet the legal requirements to-morrow night, and avoid trouble with the police. There seems to be every reason to believe that the lightweight contest will be held without interference, despite the effort that Commissioner Cropsey has already proferred charges against various captains and inspectors for allowing boxing contests in their districts.

Papa Often Spanked M'Farland for Wanting to Be a Pugilist

PACKIE McFARLAND

Packey McFarland, who meets Owen Moran in the ring tonight tells a story of his entry into the squared arena that is very similar to that told by his little fox terrier rival, papa's slipper being substituted for mother's broom-stick. Here it is:

"I never had been after me most every day around going to work, so a few days before my first public exhibition I procured a job at driving a grocer's wagon. With the job I took on one of the clerks as manager.

"He was a real manager, too. Why, when he collected the $3 that was coming to me he first counted 40 cents for our combined car fares and then took $1.80 as his share.

"That night I arrived home proud as a peacock, turned the $1.10 over to mother and went to bed feeling that I was becoming rich at a rapid rate.

"I was working on the railroad once when I was sent for by a friend in Chicago," says Packey, "who wanted me to box in some six-round bouts being held in Milwaukee.

"I was handed an A. A. U. card bearing the name 'Carl Doering.' They didn't know me as a professional at that time, and I knocked out two lightweights the first evening.

"I received two good watches and went to a hotel for the night. One of the watches disappeared. The next morning an official demanded that I show him the two prizes, and he produced the watch that I was taken to a pawnshop and sold in order to prove my guilt.

"However, they produced my missing watch, and as they had failed to prove me a professional I went my way. Today an uncle on the other side wears one of the watches and my father carries the other.

"I still remember, however, the many 'glimpses' rackets father and I had before he gave his consent to allow me to box for a living.

"In speaking of the bout to-night, the boyhood champion said:

"I think I'm at my best now. I need more experience, but I learn something from everybody I box with, and I'm picking up new tricks and new points all the time.

"I can make 133 pounds ringside, and I hope to win the lightweight title before I retire. Guess that's why I stick to the game—I want to win a championship before I quit."

WELLS IN SHAPE FOR M'KINNON

With the arrival this morning of Jumbo Wells, all the principals who are to take part in the all-star bouts at the Armory A. A. this evening are on hand and in the best of shape for the contests that bright opponents may set. And, judging by the past performances of the sextet, all three of the sessions will be of the rapid fire variety order they last.

Joe Ferguson, who makes his debut to-night, was for a year the champion and sparring partner of the late Stanley Ketchel, and as he was an apt student, he picked up a lot of the secrets that brought fame to the great middleweight. The swift, shifting, heavy hitting and the ring masterliness of his mentor he has mastered until he has earned a reputation, and is known wherever he has appeared. Little Jerry Doyle is going along so well, however, that his admirers cannot see anything but a win for the Cambridge boy, and naturally, a big boost in reputation if he does win.

Jumbo Wells, accompanied by Johnny Mack, arrived this morning from New York. Mack is very enthusiastic over his protege, who he says is the best boy he has ever handled at any weight. This fact alone indicates what Bill McKinnon is up against. Still McKinnon is not worrying and points to the fact that he has invariably been able to stick it out even against the hardest hitting men he has run up on to face. Bill, however, believes that Jim Flinn he will be doing the fortyfour and that Wells will have a tough time in slinging over anything that looks like a sleep producer.

Benny Kaufman, who reached here last night with Ferguson, feels that he has the chance of his life to-night. In getting another crack at Dyson, and that latter will go down to defeat. The middleweights of the Rhode Islander, who are coming up on a special train are looking heavily on their favorite to bring home the long end of the honors.

DUFFY GIVES SCALER A MARATHON RACE

Kid Scaler of Spokane and Freddie Duffy of Jamaica Plain bored ten rounds to a draw at the Dreamland Park last night. Scaler was the aggressor throughout, and he was through no fault of his that the contest went the limit. Duffy danced around and kept out of the way and rarely led off to the Spokane lightweight. Duffy looked much bigger and heavier than Scaler.

Scaler tried every way to make the Jamaica Plain boxer stand and box, but the latter only ducked away and ran around the ring. After receiving a right to the jaw in the first round Duffy appeared afraid of Scaler and from then on simply ran away. Al Scaler could do was to chase Duffy around the ring. Duffy may have landed the greater number of blows, but they lacked force and were scored only from a defensive point.

In the semi-preliminary Mack defeated Young in six rounds.

HOLYOKE PUTS BAN ON BOXING BOUTS

HOLYOKE, March 14.—The Holyoke A. C. was not able to hold its boxing bout in Rachliffe Hall. A 24 foot ring had been constructed and invitations sent out, but a number of the citizens of the city protested so strongly to members of the Board of Aldermen and to C. W. Rachliffe, who rented the hall, that Mr. Rachliffe gave notice to the club manager that the bout could not take place.

MANY THANKS FOR THE KIND INvitation to attend the Sports' meeting of the running horses at Dedham the early track in the last where a wager can be laid, and to be a guest at Mr. Brock, the pretty Baltimore suburb one of the handsomest racing days in the Maryland metropolis. Maryland fried chicken, and all the "things" canvass back duck and sage and tea and all other good things. Well, it looks as if they would go some at Pimlico, in other places beside the race track.

INFORMATION REACHES ME FROM a source very close to the throne that Packey McFarland is receiving 35 per cent of the gate for his contest with Owen Moran in New York to-night, win, lose or draw. It certainly costs money to get the applause. There seems to be no function in the big city quoted upon which Lightweight world can't draw $100 to $500 in favor of McFarland. And, by the way, a telegram from Lynn says that exery possible effort is being made to bring Packey and Matt Wells the new Hampden lightweight champion, together in Lynn on the night of Derby Day, the weight to be 135 pounds at 2 o'clock.

PRESIDENT COMISKEY OF THE CHIcago White Sox declares he would not sell the release of his third baseman, Harry Lord, for $25,000 cash. The Matteboy is going like a prairie fire in the preliminary practice. Which recalls pretty the old adage:

THE BOXING BOUT OF TEN ROUNDS between Al Artell and Frankie Burns has been definitely set for March 31, and the weight will be 135 pounds. Also from New York comes the word that Montana Dan Sullivan and Frank Mantell of Pawtucket will meet at Belmont A. C. that city next Tuesday evening.

"POOCH" DONOVAN, THE HARVARD track trainer, is a ready getting some of his long distance men to work. Any day now a number of those spare looking individuals can be seen trotting up and down the pathways about Soldiers Field wherever the ground is firm enough to permit them to run with safety. It will be sometime, however, before the men can get on the track, for the frost is not even out of the ground on the cinder path.

MARTIN OUT TO STOP KID SHEA

The three ten round bouts which will make the all star show to be given by the Queen City A. A. at Manchester, N. H., to-morrow night, has caused widespread attention among boxing fans and the advance sale of tickets indicate that there will be an overflow crowd.

The bout between Terry Martin of Philadelphia and Kid Shea of South Boston looks like the best of the three battles that are to be staged. Martin is a very busy fighter who never hesitates in waiting in spots if he is getting more than his share of punishment. He is in fine shape and determined to put a stop to the long list of victories that Shea has to his credit.

The spectators are assured of a real fight when these boys get together. There will be no [illegible] boxing. It will be a case of bore in and slug from the time that the gong sends 'em at it.

The Trail of the Viper

The slimy trail of Mormonism, blazed by Prophet Smith and his political satellites, stretches across the continent into the Nation's Capitol, foreshadowing the vicious domination of Mormon influence.

For example—Senator Dubois attacked the Mormon Church and attempted to unseat Senator Smoot, the Mormon Senater from Utah. Smoot is still in the Senate, while Dubois is lost—vanished—politically destroyed

Alfred Henry Lewis, in April Cosmopolitan, attacks the motives of the Mormon Church and exposes to the raw the vicious methods of its hierarchy.

He shows how and why polygamy is the one unalterable purpose of Mormonism —how it is the very cornerstone of Mormon hopes for complete political dominion over the United States.

AL DELMONT WINNER OVER HAPPY DAVIS

THORNTON, R. I., March 14.—Al Delmont of Boston defeated Happy Davis of Philadelphia in a fast battle of fifteen rounds at the Rhode Island A. C. For five rounds the featherweights battled on even terms, with the pace as fast as any seen at the Thornton Clubhouse this season. With the sixth, however, the Boston fighter began to jab his left to the head and to cross his right, and from that moment there was never any doubt as to the outcome. The Philadelphian was on the receiving end most of the time and gave a good exhibition of gameness.

Brave Claude Eclair would fain rescue beauteous Rosamond from the clutches of dastardly Desmond, but the cur has the drop on him. When a guy has the drop on you, there is only one thing to do, and that is whatever he tells you to do. In this case, the villain says: "Desist!" Whereupon our hero immediately desists.

Just about this time Desmond decides that he has been hanging about the Forge of London long enough, so he grabs an automobile while the owner isn't looking and heats it away from there. But Claude bangs onto that private suit, it comes in mighty handy to stop the bullets that the Coldstream Guards are firing at him.

Throwing in the high speed, Desmond quickly leaves Claude and the Coldstream Guards far behind. Now there is nothing to bar his progress but that dinky little rope which the bobbies have stretched across the street. When the villain sees it, he laughs in scorn that they should think to stop him by a fool stunt like that.

But that dinky little rope is not a rope at all. It's a live electric wire, and when it comes in contact with the hardware on the automobile it causes a terrific shock. The Englishman is making. The current wasn't a little bit stronger.

Still, it was strong enough to stop the progress of Desmond in the middle of his notorious career, and that's going some. The English courts will make quick work of him as soon as possible with an established electrical device, and Desmond's days from arrest will not help him much.

There months are supposed to have elapsed between the preceding picture and this one. Desmond has been tried and sentenced to be transported to Australia. A tussle and Desmond ambles with him to see that he didn't get lost. This may or may not have been a wise move on their part. You can tell better when you see tomorrow's pictures.

Keep Right On!

LOTS of shrugs and lots of sneering!
Let 'em sneer.
Let 'em hear you're hard of hearing
When they jeer.
That's a sign that envy's gnawing.
No one heeds when crows are cawing,
Just say nothing, keep on sawing.
Let 'em sneer.

Lots of jolly, lots of cheering,
Let 'em cheer.
Only hold on to your gearing.
Keep it clear.
No one heeds when monkeys chatter,
Just the same when people flatter;
Praise or blame, it doesn't matter.
Let 'em cheer.

If the proper course you're steering,
Boldly steer.
Soon the good that you are nearing
Will appear.
From the course you'll soon be straying
If you ever what folks are saying.
What your chart shows clear obeying.
Boldly steer.

Good Stories

WILLIAM R. HOTCHKIN, president of the Sphinx Club, said of advertising, at a recent banquet of the club.

"Honest advertising and honest goods are the only methods that pay. The public wants honest goods. Advertise them, then, honestly, and the coy public will respond like Peggy.

"'Peggy,' said Sandy, 'Ah'm sayin', Peggy, will Ah kiss yer cheek?'

"'If yo does,' said Peggy, Ah'll skreich.'

"'Ah' said Sandy, 'dinna skreich.'

"'An' don't ye kiss me on the mouth, then,' said Peggy, for if ye did Ah couldna skreich at all.'"

A DEAD old lady, who was visiting near a prison, was very much exercised in her mind as to the physical and spiritual health of the convicts.

Meeting a squad one day, she asked the warden in charge if she might present them with some delicacies she had with her and a few tracts.

The warden, as was his duty, replied in the negative.

Then she pleaded to be allowed to speak a word of admonition and comfort.

"No, ma'am," said the warden. "It's against the regulations."

"Oh, dear, dear!" sighed the old lady. "But tell me, do you think they are all converted?"

"Well, ma'am, I shouldn't take it upon myself to say that," he answered. Then, seeing her distressed face, he added: "But there's one thing I will say for them, they're all teetotalers and non-smokers."

And the old lady departed much comforted.

Health and Beauty Queries

By MRS. MAE MARTYN.

Madge: For your hollow cheeks and wrinkled face I recommend frequent applications of a good greaseless complexion cream jelly, also brisk massaging. By stirring together one ounce almonds, two teaspoonfuls glycerine and one-half pint cold water, allowing to stand over night, you will have an extra good complexion cream jelly. Use this also for massaging. It will clear up your whole face, reducing all dirt from the pores, and soon you will find your complexion smooth, plump, fresh-looking and nourrished. This is an excellent cream for treating blackheads, freckles and roughness of the skin, and will rid you of those very large pores.

I have never found anything to equal almonds cream jelly for improving a complexion.

S. R. O.: If your superfluous flesh proves annoying and distressing, try the following fat reducer which has given excellent results: Dissolve four ounces of parnotle in 1½ pints hot water; when cool strain and take a tablespoonful of the liquid before each meal. This remedy is harmless. By avoiding very rich foods and taking only a light meal you will find this remedy will cut down your weight very rapidly.

Nadie: To strengthen your weak eyes and rid them of an anemic appearance, put in each eye daily two or three drops of a fine, strengthening tonic made by dissolving an ounce of crystos in a pint of water. Use the eye tonic as a preventive and strengthening and by using it regularly, in a short time it will make your eyes strong, clear and sparkling. I find it unequaled as a prompt eye tonic for treating weak, inflamed, expressionless eyes.

Lovera: (a) Don't worry. What if your hair is a little thin, look stringy and is hard to do up so as to make look full? There is a remedy for all this. Shampoo your hair once in two weeks with a teaspoonful of canthrox dissolved in a cup of hot water, rinsing afterwards in clear water. The rich, cleansing lather will release you. This will rid your scalp of dirt and dandruff and make your hair soft and glossy. Your hair will dry quickly and be so fluffy and nice you will forget your hair troubles. But don't wash your hair with soap. The alkali in soap ruins the hair gloss, makes it streaky and dead looking. (b) To make an excellent skin whitener and complexion beautifier, see answer to Miss E. R.

Miss E. R.: A lotion that will help your red hands, dark face and neck permanently can be made by dissolving four ounces of spurmax in one-half pint of hot water and adding two teaspoonfuls of glycerine. This lotion will whiten and beautify your skin and take away that coarse, muddy look you have. This is much better than face powder, as it does not clog the skin, and will not rub off easily, like the powder does when you wear a veil. Spurmax lotion is inexpensive and will give any sallow, oily skin a pinkish, youthful appearance. It is fine for cold sores, tan, freckles and as a protection to the face against winds and changes of weather. I think you will like spurmax lotion very much.

Jessie H.: Some sage dressings are beneficial to the scalp, but I never recommend them on account of the danger of their oily or discoloring effect. If you want a good, dependable remedy for dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair, try an ounce of quinolin dissolved in one-half pint each of alcohol and water. This will put your hair and scalp in a healthy condition. Apply the lotion twice a week, rubbing it gently into the hair roots. It is free from oil and makes a fine dressing for the hair. I know of many ladies troubled with "hopeless" cases of dandruff and falling hair that found this a real boon.

Lucrecia: You say your complexion is lifeless and you are constantly tired and nervous. This comes from too little exercise and an over-indulgence in heavy foods, producing a sluggish condition which will send a lack of proper nourishment for the skin cells. Here is a simple and pleasing recipe for an excellent blood tonic and complexion builder. Buy a two ounce bottle of sarsena and put in a half pint bottle, then add a half cup sugar and hot water to make a full quart. Take a tablespoonful before each meal. This tonic expels impurities and carries the blood. It will give you renewed energy and your complexion will assume the natural rose tint.

Muriel M.: You can restore the youthful tint, gloss and brilliancy which blonde hair should have if you use a peroxide of marlox at the druggist's and steep in a pint of water. Before using, cleanse your hair with canthrox and dry, then wash with marlox tea, rinse in clear water and dry. This is simple, inexpensive and gives a very pretty color to hair which has grown dry and lifeless. But don't wash your hair with soap. The alkali in soap ruins the hair gloss, makes it streaky and dead looking. (b) To make an excellent skin whitener and complexion beautifier, see answer to Miss E. R.

"How you do go on about the girl!"

Synopsis of Previous Instalments

Edward Templar, the young scion of a rich old English family, is about to go to the Boer War, but before he leaves England he decides to visit his uncle and aunt at their country house, the Rose Den, on the edge of the New Forest, to say farewell.

Before entering the house he plans to spend an hour of solitude in the garden where he had passed pleasant moments in boyhood. As he lies on the sward he hears the notes of a pipe and cautiously looks through the underbrush to ascertain what strange musician is about in the depths of the forest. The music is unusually good.

Presently, from his place of concealment he sees an open glade, golden in the sunlight—a veritable sylvan theatre. At one side, on a fallen sapling, sits a boy, barefooted, bare-chested, blowing at a gleaming pipe.

To the amaze of the stranger Pan dances a reprise. It was the dance of the wild wood nymph, and the music was the music of the Valse des Fleurs. The flute of Pan was a penny whistle.

The dancer's straight, limp, black hair hung in hanks on each side of a narrow brown face that brightened suddenly at the brow, where large black eyes were set.

Her bare, brown arms waved and wove the air into circles; her ankles, brown, too, and the bare feet touched the mossy turf in swift, soft caress.

Suddenly she seemed to tire of her dancing. She moved in graceful step toward a branch, there hung a little drum. Before this she postured, with outstretched arms, then receded from it, rushed toward it and, catching it in her arms, flung it away to an inner recess behind the oak.

The music ceased.

From her place of concealment behind the oaks, the girl dancer calls out to Pan that here is "a man hiding in the undergrowth."

"I don't see anyone," says the boy looking vainly around.

Sandy, the girl, tells him she can't see the man, but she knows he is there because she's a witch and can tell things. She then bids the boy to conceal his face and calls out: "Now, man, come out! I don't speak."

The stranger comes out of hiding and faces her, while the boy hides his face. She imposes silence on the intruder and by signs he agrees not to speak. She offers to tell Templar's fortune and produces a pack of cards. When she sees what the stranger is she refuses to do so, but threatens to speak, but she tells him it is "all a pack of nonsense."

HE thought a moment, then handed her another card from his case and the pencil.

"Write it," he said, voicelessly, with lips elaborately forming the syllables.

She hesitated, shrugged her shoulders and wrote:

"You will go beyond the seas. There is money for you. And love. But something terrible. And it will be the person you wished about's fault. I mean through her."

When he read it, he wrote: "Do you mean I shall be killed—woundedly" and she wrote under it: "I do not know. You'll be in danger, frightful danger. But it's all nonsense, really."

Templar smiled with his lips, but the smile went no further. In his heart he was uncomfortable. He was, you see, on his way to South Africa, where men were being wounded and killed. Of course, it was all nonsense—but it was uncomfortable nonsense, and it did not rhyme with the hour or the scene.

She took his hand, looked eagerly at the lines and nodded in reluctant confirmation.

"Your Hand Says the Same."

"Your hand says the same," was what she nod and the raised eyebrows conveyed.

"It be gone—may I open my eyes?" said Denny.

"No—not yet. He is just going. There is no fortune to tell you," she said. "There are foreign countries, and a woman, and something I can't understand about a head. The head of a college, perhaps it might be a bishop, or a king, or the Pope, or a millionaire. But it's all nonsense, really. Good-by. Silence to the death!"

"Silence to the death," said Templar, voiceless and elaborate of gesture.

"Now go," said the child. And he went. "I heard him go. He's gone now," said Pan. "I may look now, mayn't I?" beam of her dancing shape danced again before the eyes of his memory.

"Oh, yes—you may look now, Denny. Oh, Denny, dear, I can make you believe anything I like, can't I? You really thought there was some one here, didn't you "

"There was some one here," said the little Pan, "and when you said that about the dogs tearing him I wished as I was your little dog really, like what you says I am sometimes."

"There was no one here at all," said the girl deliberately, and laughed in his face. "No one at all—I made it all up. There was no one here. Do you believe me "

"Yes," said Pan slowly; "yes, I believe you, but I know better, all the same.

A wing of silence seemed to sweep through the wood.

"I know," said the girl-child. "But it's I who make you think you know better, too. Do you understand that, Denny?"

"It's you that makes me go on being alive at all, I think," said Pan, "making me think things ain't much longside that."

"Nonsense," she said briskly. "Where's your little friend?"

He reached his hand down behind the tree trunk on which he sat, and pulled up the "little friend" that had lain there hidden.

It was a crutch.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Templar was the soul of honor. He never told anyone about the sylvan scene and Pan, or the child-nymph who danced and told fortunes and was altogether so wonderful and impossible. But he did say, after dinner, for which he had only the barest time to dress,

"Who Is the Girl" He Asked

"I say, auntie, who's the little girl in blue, with hair like a black horse-tail, that walks about the forest?"

And the aunt replied:

"Oh, that's poor little Alexandra Mundy. Runs quite wild. It's a dreadful pity."

"She looked quite enough," said Templar, deliberately, thinking of her in the blue frock, of her denuments, and not in the red and white of her dance.

"Oh, well," said the aunt, "one hears very odd things."

"Such as—"

"Oh, well—she's always about with a cripple boy, one of those 'Happy Holiday Fund' children—come down for a fortnight and then old Mr. Mundy—her grandfather, you know—sort of pensioned him permanently into the family he was staying with. And now he's having the boy taught music. The violin and all sorts of things. And Alexandra spoils him completely."

"But who are they?—I don't remember the name."

"He's very rich—tallow. I think it was Son married an actress," said the uncle. "Nobody knows them, you know."

"But doesn't the old gentleman look after her?"

"Oh, he's always away—in Athens or Venice or somewhere, collecting rubbish. She has governesses, of course, but she sets them at defiance. You mark my words, that old tallow man will live to regret it."

"Is she so very naughty " Edmund asked lastly.

"She's outre, my dear," said his aunt firmly, "outre. She's eccentric—flighty, and I'm very much afraid that when she grows up she may even be not respectable."

"Do you think she's pretty?" Edmund asked warily; and the waits and red and thanks—no, I never use a watch." When the cigar had been lighted from a glowing duke of red-hot wood Edmund tried again.

Templar Asks About the Girl

"What makes you think that Mundy can did it on purpose?"

"Well, you see the money was all going to went to some trunk or other."

"I told Mr. Mundy so," said the uncle.

"And the girl?"

"How you do go on about the girl! Well, but what I was telling you when your wife interrupted. After the death—I'm getting it was suicide or not. I have my own opinion about that—and any one can stick anything else."

"After the death," Templar permitted himself to interrupt, with patient impatience. The years that rob us of so much are so few some things generous, and the old gain in words where they lose in ideas. Templar saw this and said.

"After the death."

"Well, as I was telling you after the death it was most painful. She never waited even for the funeral, or to see her guardian, a very worthy sort—one of the family solicitor as it happened. She never waited to see what was left out of the wreck, or from the sale, or anything. She took all her clothes as well as other things, and went."

"Where to?"

The aunt's shoulders shrugged nearly to her ears in the expression of her complete dissociation from such "goings on."

"Ah—where, indeed? She and her old nurse—and that lame fiddling youth who was not quite right—they all went, like the foiled Arabs in the hymn, only, of course, they went by train, two fly-loads of boxes and things, besides a cart, and no one at the station had the sense to stop them."

"No one had any right to stop them!" said the uncle, "except Wigram and Hucks, and they weren't there."

"Well, anyhow, they went. But that's not the worst. The heartless girl sent all the servants away and, of course, every one thought she wanted to be alone with her sorrow. But not she. My dear, that abandoned girl just wanted to be alone to take things. She stole everything valuable she could lay her hands on—books, silver, linen curios—all the jewelry—"

"Well, really," said the uncle, "that was her mother's, anyway."

"Well," said the aunt, not influenced by the uncle or, as one look it, and she and the housekeeper packed it all up, in dozens of boxes and packages—regular hams some of them were, the station master told your uncle. Left behind nothing of the creditors, as Mr. Wigram most properly put it."

To Be Continued To-morrow.

Earth's Mines

THE mould is loosen and bare
Beneath the frost cold air.
The gardens frown, till we forget
The splendor of rose and violet.
The sweetness of the mignonette.
And dwell a while was there.

But warm beneath lie still
The bulbs no frost can kill;
The wealth of all the earth is there,
The wealth that all the world may share
The silver of the snowdrop fair,
The gold of daffodil.

Cheerful Guest Rooms To-day

NOW, when week-end visits are so universal, even the most retiring of families are apt to find frequent use for their guest rooms.

Fortunately, the old-fashioned "spare" room is a thing of the past. And well it is so, since it no longer left to decay in its closed and unfriendly shadows, nor to pass in distress upon the horrors of photographic art which haunted its walls, nor to look with contempt upon its more or less furnished bed.

The accomplishments of the "spare" room into the guest room is only another of the delightful improvements of modern life. The modern room has now become a thing of joy. A clever hostess, instead of making it a receiving room for every family horror, now strives to fill it with all that is soothing and artistic.

A charming scheme for such a room is mauve and gray. The paint should be of ivory and the faintly patterned paper have a frieze of drooping mauve poppies and the rug have cream and mauve tones.

This scheme is not so expensive as one might think, for good mauve and green pottery can be had at low prices, while mauve and green-patterned chintzes are easy to get.

Little bandboxes, which tone in with the color scheme, should be hung on the walls in narrow ivory or silver frames. A well-appointed writing desk with dainty stationery is a necessity of every guest room, as well as a little framed card stating post and news hours.

There should be plenty of room, unlittered with the household bric-a-brac, so that a guest may place her own belongings about her and feel instantly at home. Then flood the room with sunshine and you have a guest room redolent of refinement and charm, instead of the bleakness of the old fashioned "spare room" where one's friendship was sorely strained if one stopped longer than a night.

A Leather Muff

A LEATHER muff does not sound very warm, does it? But it is just as warm as it can be. Especially designed for automobile use, it is neat and very compact.

Made in morocco leather in many attractive colors, either black, elder or red, thickly padded and lined with moire silk the shade of the leather, it fastens over with a mother of pearl clasp and when shut looks like a fat handbag.

Like a handbag, too, it has a compartment for a purse, powder puff and mirror, also a small engagement book with a gold pencil.

A pocket is also provided to hold the handkerchief.

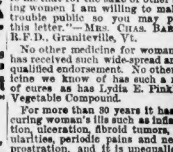
CHANGE IN WOMAN'S LIFE

Made Safe by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Graniteville, Vt.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms, and can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved worth mountains of gold to me, as it restored my health and strength. I never forget to tell my friends what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me during the trying period. Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my trouble public so you may publish this letter."—Mrs. Chas. Barclay, R.F.D., Graniteville, Vt.



No other medicine for women's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine we know of has such a record of cures as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than 30 years it has been curing women's ills such as inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains and nervous prostration, and it is unequalled for carrying women safely through the period of change of life.

The testimonials which are constantly being published in these advertisements are guaranteed to be absolutely genuine.

TO DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

STOCKS GO UP IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, March 14.—Any trepidation which Wall Street might have felt over the decision of the Supreme Court establishing the validity of the corporation tax measure has disappeared, and the weakness which immediately following the decision reacted in firmness at the opening to-day.

On over-night buying orders there was a fractional advance, with Pennsylvania the leader. Pennsylvania opened with an increase of ¼. Erie was unchanged, as was St. Paul and Southern Pacific. Reading opened ⅛ over last night's close. Union Pacific was up ⅜ and Atchison up ¼.

United States Steel led the industrials with an advance of ⅜. The coppers were in good demand, with Amalgamated showing an initial advance of ¼. American Ice was up ½. There was a fair volume of activity and considerable covering.

Today's news on the Mexican situation was not calculated to prove a factor in the market. The favorable statement of foreign trade for February helped the general tone. Later on, as opposed first with moderate activity, American railway shares in London were steadily marketed, being generally noted. The stagnation of business in this country resulting from the revolution was held as the cause of the weakness of the London market. Canadians being the one exception there.

Indications were that the cotton market opened steady with prices 3 to 8 points above yesterday's close. Liverpool and May up nine. Futures were dull in Liverpool, and spot quiet there with prices easy.

AMERICANS BID UP CORONATION RENTS

LONDON, March 14.—It is stated here that wealthy Americans are making high bids for furnished houses in the West End during the coronation days. Mayfair peer is reported to have refused $50,000 for his London residence for six weeks to an American. It is also offered $85,000 for a house for three months. The owner refused to accept less than $100,000. John Hays Hammond, special ambassador from the United States, will pay $10,000 a week, it is reported, for the Burdett-Coutts mansion.

Business Success Through Publicity

How Women Have Started Business.

Some women have not been slow to avail themselves of the force of advertising. Others when confronted with the necessity of securing the wherewithal for living and the desirability of increasing their income have found advertising the open sesame to results.

A woman in an Eastern city started making excellent cosmetics and lotions. She also got up a treatment for improving the quality of the hair. For a time she was her own manufacturer, her own salesman. Little by little the business grew.

Her husband, a business man, was amused with her efforts to add to her pocket money, but did not interfere with her from her business enterprise.

Her business finally reached a point where it needed capital for enlarging and publicity for extending the market. A friend commended her to an advertising agent. The advertising agent looked into her proposition, saw that she had a good thing, that the public had a desire for which was limited only by her inability to properly advertise it and he bought out her line, paying her a good sum for the good will and formula.

He retained her at a large salary to manage the manufacturing end of the business. Today, as the result, a well-known Eastern advertising agent is preparing to begin an extensive advertising campaign in the newspapers for the line of proprietory articles, all of which are to be sold under a woman's name.

Another instance is that of a woman in the West who bought ostrich feathers in quantities, used small spaces, advertised extensively good and built up a mail order business which amounted in the course of a few years to a net profit of something like $40,000 a year.

Advertising is not only educating people to the desirable quality of your goods, but making the goods known everywhere. Some people have an idea that newspaper advertising is most expensive. On the contrary, considering the number of people you reach and the frequency of insertions it is really the most economical form of advertising. You can reach more quickly in a given locality through newspaper advertising than any other.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

No one appears to have taken seriously those railroad presidents who have conjured up all sorts of evils in consequence of the decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Lawyers of dual penetration profess to discern a danger precedent in the corporation tax law. The Federal government may, they say, have been given a finger in a personal business. Soon the Federal authorities will want a hand in everything. Uncle Sam's agent may be found a welcome guest at the directors' meeting of just the way business is conducted. The charter of every corporation, they say, must be changed to operating accounts, and the carping critics foresee that the interstate commerce commission has established similar discretionary powers; for all that the complaints have grown out of so to prescribe how railway officers shall keep their books.

The promise is that there will be less publicity in corporation stocks than heretofore. The Federal government is a big investment bank. When this comes to pass the money of the public will go more to Wall Street by the railroads, for the reason that when a corporation wishes to borrow money it is not necessary to know what he is going to do with it. Once upon a time, when railroad than industrial securities, with the exception that people knew more about the railroads. The various railway companies publish weekly, monthly, quarterly, semi-annual and yearly reports, and those who wish may know about how they are getting their money's worth from some sort of an idea.

ARMY MEN ON GLIDDEN TOUR

By J. C. KERRISON.

It is understood that details from the signal corps and the engineering corps of the United States Army will act as observers on the forthcoming Glidden tour. This is a radical departure from what has gone before in the great national event.

The plan will give the army an opportunity of securing some idea of the roads and bridges that exist in the country across the border.

The run, it is understood, will start on June 15 and will finish in Ottawa not later than July 1. The approximate distance is estimated at 1,200 miles. The path finder will leave Washington the first day and cover just enough for the purpose of mapping it, and gather information of value to the tourists.

There will be at least two other cups in addition to the Glidden trophy offered for this contest. One will be known as the President's cup and the other as the Border cup.

It is understood that several local dealers will enter the contest this year, among whom will be Frank Wing with his Marmon, which has made a great record during the three weeks.

Mr. Wing's car is a Marmon touring sedan, and although it is equipped with a 6-inch Bosch this year, he is determined to play with the switch and the spark advance suddenly the motor has an explosion. The more advanced cylinder fired the engine, although not on the rear wheels had torn up a portion of the matting in the cabin.

The car was driven up the hall the Saturday previous, and that the cylinder should refill a charge of gas for one full week is rather unusual.

For the first time in the history of European motoring there is the possibility of a big Detroit delivery car being sold in France. The event is the light car race for the Coupe de Boulogne-sur-Mer on coming June 18, by cars of not more than three litres piston displacement. The three leading models of three to three and one-half inches bore and stroke are the Renault, Sizaire-Naudin, as entered a team of three cars to compete against the Frenchmen, and it is confidently stated that the other British light car factories will follow this lead are Argyll, Vauxhall, Calthorpe, and probably Star.

* * *

Rob Burman has left for the Atlantic Coast Beach speed carnival and it is said that he will drive a Buick car. Burman is the fiddled Blitzen Benz or the new Benzes which arrived from Europe last week, and has since been sold.

Burman drove his Buick Bug on Florida time at New Orleans and won the twenty-four hour event. He also failed to come the record for a mile last year in Florida the car was equipped with Firestones.

FEWER LABOR UNION MEN OUT OF WORK

In a report issued by the State Bureau of Statistics to-day, showing the state of unemployment among Massachusetts trade unionists on January, only 12,517 out of a membership of 122,812, while on January 1, 1910, 14,345 union men and women were reported as being unable to find employment out of a total of but 102,911. The per centage in 1910 out of workers in unions was 11.6, and 10.21 on January 1, 1911, a gain of 1.39 for the year.

NEWS OF BOSTON PLAYHOUSES

"The Nigger" Again Thrills a Critical Audience at the Shubert.

A tragedy of the South, pictured by thoughtful observance and placed upon the stage with master craftsmanship—that is "The Nigger." It has been seen in various cities of the country, but Boston got it last night for the second time. It is at the Shubert Theatre.

"The Nigger" is a human document. Just as "Uncle Tom's Cabin" told a tragedy of a great story in Civil War times, so "The Nigger" depicts a phase of the same dismal problem of the colored race in this country to-day. It is a play that sounds the mind for weeks after it is seen. One sees the old Southern mansion, hears the old mammy talk, listens into the troubled face of the black beast who has committed a heinous crime, shudders at the mad bay of the pursuing bloodhounds, pauses at the death cry that comes from the victim of the mob. All that in the first act.

Then comes out Northern to see State, who sees an unspeakable gulf between white and black; who loves a girl tainting as she does, and who is about to face the situation through postponed pressure that he, supposed to be white, has begun to look for traits that his grandmother was a negro—that he was a bond servant—that he, who had been lynched.

The second act brings scenes over took place on a stage than the confession wrung from the old mammy that the Governor had negro blood.

The scene comes at the end of the play when the governor, who loves the girl he sees, resigns his office and goes to work side by side with her negro people for the good of the race. It is a play that the negro publicists have long wanted to see, and they left the theatre, and are talking about it. The one and three acts story is built the Governor did not, or could not, marry the girl. And yet if he had, all that had gone before would have been futile.

The play is by Edward Sheldon. It is the author's first big effort and he has carried out to finish. It can be proud of "The Nigger." The cast is worthy of the gravity of presentation than either.

Lawrence Eyre brings a fine voice but not the inet which it seeks to express. The part of Henry Worthington Beecher is to the slave girl from his pulpit. But he did it, and those who saw it never forgot it.

It would be well to single out by speak individually of the cast in "The Nigger," there is no one. It is one that required skill in assembling, and that work has well done. There is not a weak member in the play. Guy Bates Post was to Governor, and Agnes Scott played the charming Southern girl whom he loved.

Mr. Carlyle's impersonation of a civil er and politician was lifelike, and Maud Durand, as the mammy, had a fine piece of character delineation. If there's nothing the matter with your heart and your nerves you're good—see the play!

Keith's.

A uniformly excellent bill is to be seen at Keith's Theatre this week. The feature is the pantomime, "The Sons of Paris," presented by Miss Minni Amato and Aurelio Cocca. Their "dance of the dagger" was espatially executed. Will Archie, Tim Waters and Lew Madison were seen in a clever musical comedy act, Lillian Shaw sings a number of songs most entertainingly. The children were much in evidence in the Wellington troupe of bright-plumaged parrots in charge of Professor Nibbs. In the Big City Four was presented an excellent group of singers. Feats of strength and daring were contributed by the Alpine troupe of gymnasts. Among the other numbers on the bill were Ward Brothers, the juggling of Paul Latrosk, an original number presented through by Collins, Tracy and Steele and some skilful club swinging by Frank Allard.

Grand Opera House.

Lovers of finished acting flocked to the Grand Opera House last night to see Thomas E. Shea in a revival of "A Soldier of the Cross," a play which was originally produced in Boston about three years ago. The play deals with the conversion to Christianity of Alaz, a famous gladiator, who unexpectedly discovers his former idol in the person of Claudia, a slave girl. One of the star scenes of the play is a battle with lions in an arena, accompanied by the Princess Astrella.

The manner in which the Christian prayers are answered in the latter part of the event was admirably portrayed. The scenic effects through the play are worthy of commendation, especially that in which the wooden cross, the emblem of the Christian faith, is illuminated with a brilliant red glare.

In the role of Alaz, the terror of all opponents, Mr. Shea more than lived up to his reputation as a forceful actor. The scenes in which he and his daughter meet were tearful ones, while in the other scenes his acting in the arena called forth rounds of applause from the audience.

Mr. Shea is supported by a large company, many members of which deserve credit in making the play a successful one. On Wednesday and Saturday nights Mr. Shea will appear in "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" For all other performances this week, "A Soldier of the Cross" will be given.

MISS FLORENCE ROCKWELL

Plenty of Good Drama and Lively Musical Comedies for the Theatregoers.

cles that carried the performance through to success.

Orpheum Theatre.

The big feature of the new program at the Orpheum Theatre yesterday was Harry Mayo, late star of the famous Empire City Quartet. Mr. Mayo's act proved popular from the start. The balance of the vaudeville bill, which also included a new list of motion pictures, was attractive in every particular.

Scenic Temple.

The new program at the Scenic Temple yesterday contained several features in both vaudeville and motion pictures that were appropriate to the holiday that comes later in the week.

Plays That Remain.

Billie Burke began her second week at the Hollis Street Theatre in "Suzanne" this evening. This is her final week.

"The Lottery Man" began a new week at the Majestic Theatre last evening. It is one of the laughing hits of the town.

"The Commuters" continues its prosperous career at the Park Theatre, playing to capacity business at every performance.

"The Girl of the Golden West" began a new week at the Colonial Theatre last evening. It is a pleasing musical play.

John Craig and his players at the Castle Square Theatre began their second week in the play "The End of the Bridge" yesterday. There were two capacity audiences.

The second week of "Naughty Marietta" at the Boston Theatre was begun last evening. This is one of the most delightful light operas of the season.

Margaret Anglin is finding continuous success in "Green Stockings," which began its second week at the Tremont Theatre last evening.

"The Light Eternal," with Eugenie Blair as its star began its second week of repertoire business at the Globe Theatre yesterday.

$500,000 TO TIE ROBIN'S TONGUE

NEW YORK, March 14.—Financiers who have been exerting all their power to head off District Attorney Whitman in his investigation into the wrecking of the Carnegie Trust Company even managed to get a representative into the Tombs prison and have him offer Joseph A. Robin $500,000 if he would protect them.

This fact was made public to-day after a consultation between Robin, who is awaiting sentence for wrecking the Northern Bank, and his counsel, Samuel J. Goldsmith. Robin after going over the matter carefully decided to reveal the whole affair because his would-be bribers threatened his sister, Dr. Louise Rabinowitch.

The threat was made in an effort to force Robin to take the bribe and betray the District Attorney. All the facts were told to District Attorney Whitman and he was promptly by Dr. Rabinowitch the protection necessary.

BUFFALO BILL FOR PLACE IN SENATE

TUCSON, Ariz., March 14.—It is stated here that Colonel William F. Cody (Buffalo Bill) plans to round out his career as one of the great politicians of the West by becoming the first United States Senator from Arizona. While saying he is too busy to discuss politics, Cody has started the rumor. Colonel Cody has established a home here and has a permanent camp in the Santa Catalina mountains.

RIOTING IN CANADA AFTER ELECTIONS

FREDERICTON, N. B., March 14.—Rioting followed the announcement tonight of the result of the County election involving the liquor laws, and police officers who attempted to quell the disturbance were roughly handled. Two men were arrested, but rescued by the crowd. The excitement was because the anti temperance faction elected an entire ticket.

JUMPS THROUGH WINDOW IN FIRE

Jerri Mevola, twenty-two years old and single, jumped through the glass window in front of his tailor shop at No. 196 Salem street, North End, to escape from fire that started with the exploding of a can of kerosene oil. His right wrist was so badly cut that the firemen had to apply a tourniquet to stop the flow of blood. Mevola was badly burned about the hands and arms, and all his clothing was either burned off or cut to pieces from his body. He was taken to the hospital in Haymarket square.

Mevola told the police he had touched a match to his stove, when the fire flared up. Mevola lives at No. 68 Charter street. The damage to the shop was $100. The building is owned by Nicola Mastronarino.

The Chamber of Commerce Safeguards the Interests of the Public

The Boston Chamber of Commerce is a great institution to-day. Those who remember it when the recommendations of its officers were but the echo of the desires of the great special interests can scarcely appreciate the WONDERFUL CHANGE that has been wrought in its spirit and purpose.

Four thousand business men have banded themselves together, each contributing twenty-five dollars every year to the promotion of its objects.

Those objects are the industrial, commercial and social welfare of Metropolitan Boston. The contribution of twenty-five dollars every year by each member is a pledge of every man's earnest purpose, and its great membership of four thousand is a guarantee that the interests of its members will not be different from the general interest of the whole community. The interests of the Chamber of Commerce cannot, therefore, be the "SPECIAL INTERESTS" in the now odious sense of that term.

The general offices of the Chamber of Commerce are alive with activity for the advancement of the objects of the great organization. Special committees composed of able men and eminent experts have charge of special departments of public enterprise.

For example, there is a public utilities committee, and to this committee has fallen the task of watching over the relation between Boston and the public service corporations. In the last two years this committee has guarded the interests of Boston with watchful care, and is at this moment keeping the vigils at the State House on that very important matter which relates to the building of a tunnel between the South Station and East Boston and the proposed purchase by the Boston & Maine railroad of the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn railroad, the matter of fares and other questions incidental to this whole proposition.

Speaking through its public utilities committee, the Chamber of Commerce does not oppose the purchase of the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn railroad, nor the construction of a tunnel from the South Station to East Boston.

BUT the Chamber of Commerce urges that any act of the Legislature providing for these transportation developments shall contain certain very NECESSARY SAFEGUARDS.

First—That the tunnel shall be built by public funds and owned by the public. More than a decade ago Boston, after a bitter and prolonged political contest, settled the policy that the underground system of transportation must remain in the public control. From this policy we cannot depart now.

Second—That the date of the beginning of the construction of the tunnel shall be fixed, and the date of its completion shall also be fixed, that there may be no unreasonable delays.

Third—That the New Haven railroad shall agree to electrify the Boston & Providence railroad between Readville and the South Station; and the Boston & Maine or the New Haven shall construct two new standard gage railroad lines running parallel with the present Revere Beach & Lynn railroad from East Boston to Lynn, and to electrify both the Boston & Providence railroad and the two new parellel lines, in time to be READY FOR USE WHEN THE TUNNEL IS COMPLETED.

And further that the tunnel shall be so constructed that any railroad desiring to use it may do so upon terms fixed by the Railroad Commission. And that the companies using the tunnel shall deliver freight at any of the Boston terminals of their road at Boston rates. And that NO USE OF THE TUNNEL SHALL INTERFERE with access to wharves in East Boston either by the public or by any other railroad.

Fourth—That the East Boston tunnel shall be so altered as to admit the trains of the Revere Beach & Lynn railroad.

Fifth—That there shall be NO INCREASE OF FARES between Boston and any point on the Revere Beach & Lynn railroad.

These are the safeguards suggested by the Boston Chamber of Commerce. They are all important and necessary. Without them we could better afford to wait until these developments can be made at less sacrifice to other important interests—interests which would be well guarded by the suggestions here made, but which are wholly unprotected in the bill submitted to the Legislature by the New Haven road.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

AIDING HUMAN DERELICTS

Editor AMERICAN:

I take the liberty of expressing my earnest pleasure at the privilege of being a subscriber to the only independent and graft-exposing newspaper in New England to-day, the AMERICAN. The effective work being done through its columns, especially its editorial page, is due largely to the fact that the composer is a philanthropist and is in a position to demonstrate his faculty by being supported by a capitalist of the same nature.

I especially admired the editorial in the Sunday AMERICAN of February 5, prompted me to write this letter. It was entitled "Wireless Communication Between the Human Derelict and Those Who Might Save Him." If this message could be placed in the hands of the well-to-do and they would give it half the attention they give to the study of polo, fast automobiles, race horses, pet cats and other hobbies of people that don't know what to do themselves or how to spend their money, a much needed reform would take place in our large cities at once.

GEORGE NICKERSON.

GUARDIANS FOR CHILDREN.

Editor AMERICAN:

I have presented in the House through Representative Crocker of Ward Eleven, Boston, four bills bearing on the welfare of growing children. I hope the people of the State will take interest enough to attend the hearings which the Committee on Legal Affairs will hold later. It is my idea to give the juvenile courts the power of appointing guardians except where property rights are involved. At present the Probate Court can name any person guardian without the natural guardians knowing anything about the procedure and without anyone having the right to protest. I feel that the juvenile courts are nearer the children, and that it would be better for them to name the guardians, except, of course, where it is known that a child has property rights. Then plainly the matter is under the jurediction of the Probate Court. I think the result would be that better guardians for children would be appointed. Another bill I have presented is to prohibit moving pictures also from exhibiting pictures showing scenes of bloodshed and violence.

INSPECTION OF MEAT

Editor AMERICAN:

I read an account of the hearing before the Committee on Public Health to-day of the Legislature to provide for a uniform system of meat inspection. That would be a good law, but I would object to having fifty veterinarians employed. I don't believe they know any more about neat cattle than a good many other men, and I don't believe they know half as much about cows and their health as a good cattleman that buys and sells. Now, if that bill becomes a law I believe any reliable cattleman should have as good a chance of appointment as a "vet." I know a "vet" who is a cattle inspector, who drives by a barn, looks at the barn, gives a good bill of health and goes on to the next farmhouse. Give the position to a man who will devote all his time to the work.

DR. PARKHURST'S ARTICLE

THE ROW IN MEXICO; WHY INTERFERE?

Written for the Boston American

By Dr. C. H. Parkhurst

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner

THERE is no deepning the plagulsm of the American mind. We are all of us advocates of peace, and trumpet the praises of The Hague Tribunal and the Mohonk Conference, till there is a chance to fight, and then we are all up in arms and beat our ploughshares into swords and our pruning-hooks into spears.

The situation is precarious, and the more so because of the mystery in which the government seeks to keep it shrouded. To represent the mobilising of our army as intended for purposes of manoeuvre is to disguise the situation with a mask too diaphanous to conceal the face that is behind it.

We can conceive that the intentions of the President are pacific, for we believe in his conservatism; but we cannot forget that we have had one conservative President who was swept off his feet by popular military clamor and who allowed the country to be involved in a war that we now know to have been unnecessary and foolish.

What Right Have We to Interfere, Now, in Mexico?

The American mind is like gun cotton; it is touch and go. The war-spirit feeds upon itself and thrives upon what it destroys. Civil war is in progress in Mexico. What business is that of ours?

It was not considered, by us, that it was any of England's business to interfere with us in our Civil War, and the Board of Arbitration at Geneva made her pay heavily for having done so. But it is said that our Government ought to protect American interests in Mexico. Why?

English interests, in the United States, suffered severely during our Civil War. It makes a difference whose ox is gored. A great deal of American money is invested in Mexican railroads and other industries. But if people are dissatisfied with what their investments earn for them at home, and they choose to go off to Mexico with their surplus funds, or to Central or South America, they ought to understand that they do it at their own risks, and that the United States Government does not stand pledged as security.

It would be very convenient if, when we adventure our money in an investment that promises big returns, and the investment is imperilled, Government would come to our relief and see us through. This is what it would seem that the President's army and navy are on their way to Texas for.

Cannot But Have Unpleasant Effect on South America

The presence of our Government at so close range is evidently not welcome and cannot fail to produce an unpleasant impression not only upon the Mexicans but also upon the people of Central and South America, who are learning to think of us not so much as protectors from European invasion as police bent on regulating Southern American affairs at the dictates of our own convenience and interest.

Mixed with other inconveniences in the present situation is the fear lest the Monroe doctrine should suffer harm; and the more pacific our relations with the Southern Republics, the less will be the danger of any mishap and the less the likelihood that some European power will be called in to aid against United States interference.

For the Monroe doctrine is not a mere principle, but a political assumption, and valid only till foreign assumption shows itself strong enough to overpower it.

As relates to those republics we have in our own interest, such as theirs, assumed the character of dog in the manger, a position which we can hold till some other dog, still stronger, is invited in or has an excuse for entering in to take our place.

And there is nothing to indicate that Germany, for example, has not just as essential a right to have holdings in Central of South America as we to have holdings in Asia.

Political doctrines, like religious ones, are of account only so long as we succeed in living up to them.

England and Germany both have, by the establishment of commercial relations, done a great deal more than we toward cementing the bonds of practical friendship with the Spanish republics.

You're Contented

By KENNETT HARRIS

Do you want to know the reason why your state is low and humble?
It's the fact that you don't mind it, that you're never known to grumble.

You imagine you do finely. You're not trying to do better;
That's the weight that lies upon you; that's your little padded fetter.
You are satisfied and happy; no ambition do you cherish,
For you sleep well, eat and drink well, like the other beasts that perish.
You are certain that the kickers are all wicked or demented.
You're contented.

When kind Providence is serving, you don't ask it for a plateful
For the measly scraps and leavings you're exemplarily grateful.
You are easy, calm and placid. There is nothing that you covet.
As for feeling any envy, well, you hope you are above it.
You are virtuous and beaming in your poverty as few are,
And you say there are so many who are far worse off than you are.
Still, it isn't fair to blame you—it's the way your head is dented.
You're contented.

There are many who will praise you, but you'll notice they are leary
Of promoting you, though doubtless they are glad to see you cheery.
You will find that human nature is extremely fond of shunting
On the chap that does the lifting, while it sits and does the grunting.
I have got my own opinion. I don't know how it will strike you,
That there wouldn't be much doing if the rest of us were like you
You're the brake-locks of creation, the completest yet invented.
You're contented.

Little Bobbie

He Writes About A Literary Game

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

HUSBAND, sed Ma to Pa last nite, Missus Jenkins was telling me about a new game she has learned. It is called Read & Reflect, & Missus Jenkins says that it is not only entertaining but that it teaches a lesson. This is the way the game goes, sed Ma. A lot of people git together & Every one of them takes up a newspaper & then, in thare turn, they read sumthing, & then everybody reflects & then everybody maiks a comment.

They do? sed Pa. How thrilling. Yes, sed Ma, they do. Everybody maiks a comment, & then the next person reads sumthing, & everybody reflects over aggeen, & maiks another comment. Dear, dear, sed Pa, it hardly seems possible. Bobbie, sed Pa, go & git me my sweater. I am going to play Read & Reflect for the benneflt of your mother.

Dont be foolish, sed Ma, talking about sweaters. This leent a football game, or a prizefite, it is an intellecksual gaim, whare brain & brawn is required. Stay rite where you are, Bobbie, sed Ma, you may lern sumthing. Now, sed Ma, here is a paiper for you, a sewing paiper, & here is one for me. I will read the first item, sed Ma, and You can reflect & then comment. This is the item, sed Ma: Dorothy Arnold has not yet been given up for lost by her folks.

After reflecting for one moment, sed Pa, I have only one comment to maik & that is that Dorothy Arnold has a wunderful press agent. That is a hartless comment, sed Ma. I haven't got a hart, Pa sed. I will now read a item:

Missus Elinor Glyn says that women is not to be trusted if the glamor of weith is introduded into thare lives. What comment, if anny, have you to maik on that, sed Pa.

I never saw enuff weith glamoring around me, sed Ma, to maik a fitting comment. I dont know.

All rite, sed Pa, I am glad for to hear that for once you cudent think of anything to say. That is a gen-uine tres sed Pa. For yeers I have waited, Pa sed, to see you stunned & silent. It seems a good deal like a miracel, Pa sed. Now go ahed & read another item, he sed to Ma, & let us see what comment I have to maik.

Well, sed Ma, here is a item about a man naimed John McSweeny who says that five inches of a library was enuff for any man. He was probly referring to the five feet of books that Mister Eliot or unnbody sed was enuff to read. This is part of his five inch library:

Chapter 10 on habit by Professor James. Sixteen regrets by Lord Rosebery. Chapter 12 of Lecky's Map of Life. Now, sed Ma, what comment have you to maik?

Who was Lecky? sed Pa. It sounds like a yogi's nickname.

He must have been a grate man, sed Ma, if his naim was in that list.

I aint so sure, sed Pa. Why dident they put Billy Baxter's letters in the list? How about Grandpa's Fleas? To tell you the truth, sed Pa, I aint so vary keen for naims like Lecky & Haeckel & Spencer. I guess that they was good enuff old skaits in thare way, Pa sed, but I can't help thinking most of the riters wich made us luff. In these days of high prices and Pa, you dount have to have riters to make you think. You have to think anyway, & all the time. I prefer the riters wich maiks us luff, Pa sed, as that is sumo comment.

I guess it is, sed Ma.
